GIRLS IN BACK BAY FIGHT

Four Chorus Maids and Two Men From Show Batter Bogus Policeman

The cast of "Spice of 1922" was endangered when six members—four girls and two men—became involved in a mad fight in a Huntington avenue apartment early Sunday morning.

The details of the brawl involving chorus girls and chorus men of the show will have to be deferred, as far as Judge Hayden in Roxbury Court is concerned, until the police can find Albert J. Dailey, twenty-six, of No. 15 Bickerstaff street, Back Bay. Dailey, who broke into the apartment in which the four girls and two men were found, defaulted his bail when the hearing came up before Judge Hayden today. The judge ordered that a default warrant be gotten out for him.

Frank Zibutis, janitor of the building on Huntington avenue where the free-for-all fight was staged, appeared in court. He was charged with drunkenness and was fined $10.

GIRLS ARE SILENT.

The four girls, Sibil Stuart, Maria Chaney, Florence Dillon and Ruth Elliott, appeared in court and emulated the claim. They were no less silent than Eddie Fox and Leonard Lee, the chorus men. All six de-

RIVAL KU KLUX KLAN ENJOINED IN GEORGIA

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 23. (By International News Service).—An injunction denying the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan the right to operate under that name in the State of Georgia was granted today by Superior Court Judge George Bell. The injunction was asked by the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan against the National Klan, incorporated in Delaware, it was alleged, by W. S. Coburn, a former grand goblin of the Pacific domain.

VOLSTEAD LAW IS UPHELD AGAIN

Washington, Oct. 23. (By International News Service).—The constitutionality of the Volstead Law was again upheld, indirectly, by the United States Supreme Court today. The court dismissed the appeal of John G. Crosland of Florida from release from Federal custody. He was charged with smuggling liquor. Crosland carried an appeal on the ground that the Volstead Law was unconsitutional.

DISMISS WET SHIP APPEAL

Temporary Stay Only Allowed Owners Against Dry Rule of Daugherty

Washington, Oct. 23.—The liquor statutes in all their broadened scope outlined by Attorney-General Daugherty are now in effect and will be rigidly enforced, Prohibition Commissioner Haynes declared today.

New York, Oct. 23 (By the Associated Press). — Federal Judge Learned Hand today handed down a decision dismissing the motion of foreign ship companies for a permanent injunction restraining Federal prohibition agents from putting into effect the bone dry ruling of Attorney-General Daugherty.

He extended the stay temporarily, however, providing that the steamship companies file an immediate appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Judge Hand decided in favor of the government on all points. The decision was rendered on the specific matter of the application of foreign lines for an injunction protecting from seizure ships carrying liquor under seal on the eastbound voyage from the United States.

The decision applies to both foreign and American lines because of the statement, made by Judge Hand during the injunction proceedings last week, that defeat of the motion of the foreign lines would naturally

PONZI FIGHTS TRIAL

Judge Overrules His Motion to Stop Further Action After Present Case

Charles Ponzi, "financial wizard," today went on trial in the fourth session, Suffolk Superior Criminal Court, on charges of larceny and conspiracy.

Dapper, smiling, the promoter of the $14,000,000 bubble, stepped within the bar enclosure, faced Judge Fosdick and prepared to act as his own counsel.

Back of him and to the right of him were his seven agents, co-defendants in twenty-one indictments, and an imposing array of legal talent.

Standing out in marked contrast to the slim figure of Ponzi was the bulky form of his Nemesis, Attorney-General Allen, accompanied by two assistants, Albert Hurwitz and Edwin Abbot, and Special Attorney-General William Flaherty.

ARRAY OF COUNSEL.

And, armed with fat, shiny brief cases, reams of notes and papers, were: George Stanley Harvey, defending John A Dondero and Henry T. Nielson; Joseph Santtuosso, counsel for John S. Dondero; Wilfred B. Keenan, acting for Harry Mahony, and John F. McDonald, attorney for Rinaldi Bosselli.

Ponzi, too, carried big envelopes that bulged with important looking documents. He appeared capable and quite legal. He was calm, rel-

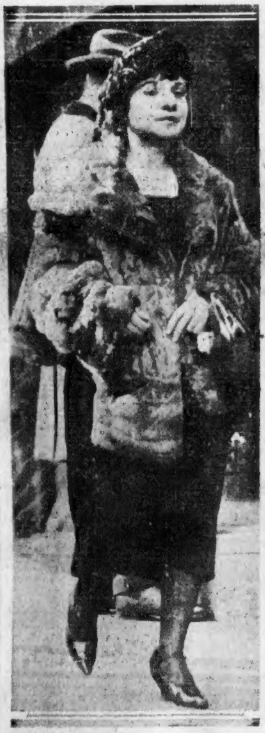
MRS. PONZI AS SHE LOOKS IN FUR COAT



The little woman presented a pathetic figure as she witnessed the opening of her husband's trial in court today. While Ponzi was dressed like a matinee idol, she wore a suit of the style of two years ago, monkey fur cape and black hat. She looked like a little girl. When Ponzi appeared she threw her arms around his neck and kissed him.

Gloucester, Oct. 23.—Running in far better shape than she did Saturday, the Henry Ford, American challenger for the North Atlantic fishing schooner championship, secured a big lead over the Bluenose in today's race.

She took the lead right from the start, held it around the first turn, increased it on the second leg and, on the start of the third leg, had widened a gap of 200 yards to 700 yards and had the race well in hand.

Ford turned the second mark three minutes ahead of the Canadian boat.

The race began with much difficulty, which promised to end in a no-contest.

TAKES LEAD FROM BLUENOSE SOON AFTER STARTING

Ford had iterated time and again that his boat would not race. Members of his crew had backed him up.

It was only when Secretary of the Navy Denby appealed to Morrissey by saying it was "for the honor of the country" that the irate skipper of the Gloucester boat changed his mind.

Some members of the crew refused to go on the Ford, and an emergency crew was hurriedly established, with only a few members of the regular crew.

Thus, with burning resentment in the breast of the skipper, with a patched up body of men to sail her, with her sail area cut down, the Ford finally started.

POSTPONEMENT REFUSED.

It had been indicated that if the Ford did not start, the Canadian defender would go over the course alone and the race would be hers by forfeit.

An anouncement that the Bluenose would start was made at 9:30 At that time the Ford asked for an hour's postponement. This was denied. The Ford then left the wharf for the start and rounded the breakwater ahead of the committee boat.

The Ford crossed the starting line at 10:01, but the Bluenose held back half a mile away to windward and made no effort to follow.

The Ford ran off about a quarter of a mile and then turned back, as the committee announced the start had been delayed till 11 o'clock.

The breeze had increased to ten knots and whitecaps were appearing.

BLUENOSE LIKES COURSE.

At 10:40, with the wind about southwest the course was signalled. It gave the boats a broad reach of five miles to Thatcher's, a ten-mile beat up the bay, a broad reach off shore of ten miles, another reach of ten miles back to Thatcher's and a close fetch, or a beat, of five miles to the finish.

The ten-mile thrash to windward up the bay was quite acceptable to the Bluenose which had no chance to show her weather qualities on Saturday.

The committee set up a new system of starting signals giving a warning at 10:45, a preparatory at 10:55 and the start at 11.

Both boats spent most of the time before 11 o'clock jockeying for positions.

Two minutes before the start the Bluenose, to leeward headed for the line rather sharp on the starboard tack.

The Ford was well up to windward and Captain Morrissey judging the distance beautifully came for the line with a rush.

Bluenose tried to head off the Ford and did cross the line first at 11:03:30, but the Ford cut in between.

FORD TAKES LEAD.

After the Ford had gained a lead of one hundred yards she seemed to slack up and the Bluenose began overhauling her.

At 11:15 the Ford was still 50 yards ahead, and slightly to windward.

Both boats were flying along with a smooth sea at their bows and held to the breeze.

The Ford turned the first mark forty-five seconds ahead of Bluenose The wind hauled more to the south, giving the boats a close fetch to the second mark.

Ford hauled down her staysail and rounded well off, with the Bluenose out into weather of her wake.

The boats were timed at first mark as follows: Ford 11:25:10, Bluenose, 11:25:55.

The Bluenose set her staysail after rounding the first mark, but the Ford continued on without the big square of canvas between the masts and seemed to have the better of the argument.

The shift of the wind robbed the boats of a chance to beat up the breeze and the race developed into the same kind as that of Saturday, a reaching affair throughout.

At 11:40 the Ford was still leading, but did not seem able to draw away as she did Saturday.

The Ford sent up her staysail again at 11:56, as the Bluenose had been gradually overhauling her.

The race had become most exciting, for the Ford's lead was very meagre and the Bluenose was holding a trifle closer to the breeze and footing just as fast.

Both were sailing close hauled from the port tack and heading almost straight for the second mark.

The wind at 11:48 showed signs of dropping.

FORD INCREASES LEAD.

At noon both boats were hard on the port tack off Eastern Point and had sailed more than half of the second leg.

The Ford had drawn away until she had a lead of 200 yards and was sailing practically as high as the Bluenose, although the latter was a trifle to the weather of the Ford's wake.

The wind had fallen to six knots and both boats showed but little list to starboard.

The wind picked up again at 12:20 p. m. and the Ford began to gain rapidly. She soon had pulled out to a lead of a quarter of a mile and was dropping the Bluenose as fast as she did on Saturday.

Both boats had their lee rails well down. At 12:25 p. m. the Ford's lead had been increased to more than 600 yards.

WIND HEADS 'EM OFF.

As the boats neared the second mark the wind hauled more to westward and headed them off, making the last three miles a dead beat.

After the Ford had gained her lead of 600 yards, the Bluenose seemed to hold her, and for a few minutes the American schooner could not pull away.

The Mayflower followed the boats closely under the same sail and seemed able to hold them both. At 12:40 the Ford still had a lead of 600 yards.

The Ford tacked to starboard at 12:53 and headed for the second mark, then two miles away. Her crew was somewhat slow in handling the light sails and it was five minutes before the staysail was reset and sheeted home.

The Bluenose did not hold as far as the Ford tacking under her at 12:57. The Bluenose crew handled her sails faster and she was in stays only three minutes.

At 1 o'clock the Ford was leading by 600 yards.

GAP WIDENS TO 700 YARDS.

In the last two miles of the second leg the Ford apparently demonstrated her superiority over the Bluenose in going to windward in a moderate breeze and smooth sea. She opened up a lead of nearly 700 yards and gained steadily.

At 1:20 it looked as if the American boat had the race well in hand and, barring accident, would win, as she showed herself much better in reaching than in the race of Saturday.

How Denby's Plea Compelled Race

Secretary Denby

At that time the Bluenose, the Canadian defender of the trophy, was sailing around Eastern Point. An increasing southerly breeze was coming in. The judges' boat was at anchor in the harbor.

Captain Morrisey took charge of the bending on of the mainsail.

The scenes preceding the decision that the Ford would sail were dramatic. Members of the Ford's crew, carrying southwesters and slickers, marched in a body through the main streets, shouting:

FORD CREW DEFIANT.

"We're through. We'll have nothing to do with the committee or its races."

Asked if they would go to see the committee, they answered:

"Let the committee come to us."

At the wharf where the Ford was docked they were met by Secretary Denby, who was an unofficial member of the Ford's crew in Saturday's race and planned to sail again today. Secretary Denby told the men that, in a way, the honor of the country was at stake. The Ford was the representative of America, he said, and it might appear that the men were quitting under fire.

"You have a job on your hands still unfinished," he declared "You have a big fish still to land."

He recommended urgently that they go aboard and get ready to sail.

WOMAN JOINS IN PLEA.

Mrs. Jonathan Raymond, wife of a substitute member of the international racing committee, added her word. She urged the men to go out and race to show the world what Gloucester men were made of.

Secretary Denby gained a few recruits and Mrs. Raymond a few more. Willfred W. Lufkin, collector of the port of Boston and chairman of the committee, with other committee members made individual appeals to the fishermen with indifferent success.

Then Captain Morrisey, surrounded by a group of his men, asserted that it was they who would actually decide the matter. With indications that many of them would race he placed himself at their head and went aboard the schooner. Enough sailors from other boats joined them to make up a full crew.

HUB GIRL'S HUSBAND IN CHURCH CLASH

(Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.)

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH

Photograph of the duke and the former Gladys Deacon taken just after their marriage in Paris. The bride was for years a close friend of the first duchess.

GLADYS DEACON DUKE BANNED BY CHURCH

London, Oct. 23.—High society circles here and on the continent are agog over the barring of the Duke of Marlborough from the diocesan conference of the Anglican Church, on the ground his divorce and subsequent marriage to Miss Gladys Deacon of Boston make him a non-communicant under the church laws.

The canonical order disbarring the duke was issued by the Bishop of Oxford, one of the leading prelates of the English church.

The diocesan conference is scheduled to convene shortly. The Duke formerly held an important position in the discussions by right of birth.

AMERICAN BRIDES.

The international romance of the Duke and Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York stirred English royalty, but that was nothing compared with the excitement created when she obtained a divorce.

In the Spring of 1921 there were rumors that the Duke was to marry Miss Deacon. This was denied several times and created interest in society circles in Europe and in Boston, where Miss Deacon originally came from.

Then on June 24, 1921, Gladys Deacon became the second American girl to assume the title of Duchess of Marlborough, one of the proudest in all England.

There was a civil service first in the British consulate at Paris, performed by the British consul in the presence of a few witnesses, including Eugene Higgins, a cousin of the bride.

SOCIAL EVENT.

The second service, the church wedding, came a few days later. It was one of the brilliant social events of the year and was attended by a great gathering of nobility from several nations as well as socially elect from America.

At that time there was some discussion relative to the Duke marrying a second time, his divorce and his relationship with the church.

CALLS WOMAN 'DECEITFUL,' ENDS LIFE

The suicide note written by James A. Meaney, before he jumped to his death in the icy waters beneath Wellington Bridge, in which he accuses his former sweetheart of being responsible for his act, was found by the police today.

The note refers to Miss Stella McKay of No. 517 Tenth street, Brooklyn, N. Y. It reads:

"My Dear Stella, One Whom I Loved and Cherished—I am writing this on the express train which left New York at midnight. I will arrive in Boston about daylight. On my arrival there I intend ending my life by jumping over Wellington Bridge. You are fully aware of what caused me to do this—you deceitful thing! My one desire is that you may always be happy."

COURT THROWS OUT W. U. CABLE CASE

Washington, Oct. 23 (By International News Service).—The Western Union Telegraph Company case, testing the right of the government to prohibit it from landing its cables at Miami, Fla., was thrown out of court today by the Supreme Court of the United States under agreement of counsel. The decision in favor of the company by a lower court was reversed without prejudice and the case ordered sent back to the lower court with instructions to dismiss it.

JUDGE REFUSES PONZI'S PLEA AT HIS TRIAL

lected and paced the enclosure, tapped his pencil against the table before him and did all that lawyers do when in court.

GUARDED BY SHERIFF.

The wizard appeared more like a Broadway matinee idol than a convict. He was resplendent in a freshly pressed blue suit that fairly oozed an atmosphere of prosperity, new pearl gray spats, that set off the shine of his new tan shoes, and a carefully knotted black four-in-hand tie.

MRS. PONZI KISSES HIM.

His face seemed slightly paler. His hair is somewhat grayer. Otherwise he was the Ponzi of prosperous days, smiling, courteous, even distinguished in appearance.

As he entered the court his eyes scanned the chamber until they found his wife, sitting quietly in the rear of the venire of talesmen from which will be chosen the jury that will decide his fate.

The moment Ponzi stepped within the enclosure, his wife threaded her way through the crowd to the railing, leaned far over, threw her arms about his neck and kissed him full on the lips.

The wizard's face quivered. His eyes grew a bit moist. Mrs. Ponzi smiled wanly, turned, went to her seat, and from there watched every move intently. She seemed very nervous and worried.

LIKE LITTLE GIRL.

Mrs. Ponzi presented a pathetic figure. Garbed in a black suit with short skirt of the style prevailing when her husband was riding on the crest of the wave of success, a monkey fur cape and snug little black velvet hat, she looked more like a little girl.

The trial that started today is, to a certain extent, a continuation of the proceedings halted on May 26, 1921, when former United States District Attorney objected on ground that a Federal prisoner serving sentence could not be tried. Sixty-four talesmen had been examined when the case was referred to the Supreme Court for decision. It has not been possible to bring it up before because of a crowded docket.

Ponzi asked Judge Fosdick to rule to the effect the government should not prosecute him on any further indictment wherein he is implicated with others in event of his acquittal of the charges for which he is now being tried.

"It is bad enough to be tried in the State courts for the same thing I was tried for in the Federal Court," said Ponzi in support of his motion. "It is far worse to be tried twice for the same thing in the State courts."

FILL JURY BOX.

Judge Fosdick refused the plea after which followed a conference of lawyers with the court relative to motions, pleas and the like. Judge Fosdick granted Ponzi the courtesy of joining. He moved for bill of particulars relative to the indictments. This was refused.

The jury box was filled just before noon adjournment. Directly after the opening of the afternoon session each was asked, "Did you or any member of your family make any investment in Ponzi's enterprise?" Several are certain to be challenged.

The list chosen: Donald M. Blair building mover, No. 5 Waban street; Charles B. Falconer, chauffeur, No. 6 Lincoln street; William McAnaul, clerk, No. 10 Arundel street; Daniel F. McBride, clerk, No. 432 Bennington street; Patrick McGuire, shipper, No. 78 South street; William G. Murphy, carpenter, No. 40 Warren street, Revere; William J. Pickance, postal clerk, No. 28 Harvard street, Chelsea; Alfred J. Pike, packer, No. 26 Howell street; Harry W. Prout, treasurer, No. 200 Faneuil street; David Solomon, machinist, No. 48 Kendall street; James Ward, electrician, No. 142 Alphonsus street; Anthony Weber, retired, No. 16 Boylston street.

The attempted suicide of her husband has not altered the attitude of pretty Mrs. Ruth O'Brien of No. 27 Freeport street, Dorchester.

While her husband, Clifford E. O'Brien, is recovering from the effects of a self-administered dose of iodine, the girl wife today said:

"I can't live on love alone. We were separated over a year. Last week he came back and I let him in so that he might be able to live. He had attempted taking his life several times before.

"I don't love him and he knows it. He has threatened repeatedly to kill himself and me if I did not stop divorce proceedings."

DITCHES TRAIN TO AVOID CRASH; 1 DEAD

West Newton, Pa., Oct. 23 (By International News Service).—Job Imhoff of Pittsburgh, fireman, was killed, George Stein of Meyersdale, Pa., engineer, was fatally hurt, and a score of passengers were injured when the Clarksburg-Pittsburgh flyer on the Baltimore & Ohio, northbound, was ditched at Suterville, near here, today. The efforts of the engineer to slow down to avoid a grade crossing collision threw the locomotive from the rails and it plunged across the street. Two express cars and two day coaches, one filled with passengers, were ditched.

BONAR LAW, AS PREMIER, SEES 'TUSSLE'

London, Oct. 23 (By the Associated Press).—Andrew Bonar Law was unanimously elected leader of the Unionist party at the party meeting held this afternoon in Hotel Cecil.

Those present included Viscount Cave, Lord Derby, Lord Carson, Viscount Peel, the Duke of Devonshire, Earl Grey, Viscount Curzon, Sir Samuel Hoare, Admiral Sueter and William Ormsby-Gore.

The presence of Lord Carson created considerable comment, adding strength to the recent rumors that the former Ulster Unionist leader intended to re-enter politics. This would necessitate his resignation as Lord of Appeal, because holders of judiciary lordships cannot participate in politics.

In the course of his address Mr. Law declared that this was not the time for introducing large schemes which might be beneficial to the Empire, however dear to his heart. He added that he should rather hope for a period of quietness than one of fierce controversy. His reference was understood to be to tariff reform.

Mr. Law declared the Irish constitution must be carried out.

Referring to Mr. Lloyd George, he said he was sure they would have "a pretty stiff tussle," but he hoped they would still be good friends afterwards.

Mr. Bonar Law lost no time, but arranged for an audience with King George at 5:30 o'clock.

The Premier-designate emerged from the meeting smiling broadly. He readily consented to pose for the photographers, while a large crowd cheered enthusiastically.

Labor to Fight for 500 Parliament Seats

London, Oct. 23 (By International News Service).—Labor is to contest 500 out of the 615 political constituencies in the forthcoming general election, laborite leaders revealed today. The leaders believe that they will win enough seats to enable them to create the first labor government in the history of England. At present laborites hold 73 seats in Commons.

Former Premier David Lloyd George returned quietly to No. 10 Downing street today to consult his former colleagues. His next speech will be delivered at Colchester on Thursday. Later he plans to tour Wales and Scotland.

Miss Kyrle Bellew, well-known English actress, has entered the political fight. She has announced her candidacy for the House of Commons at Brighton.

The Scottish temperance party has come out in support of the former Premier and the Liberal party.

Former Colonial Secretary Winston Churchill, who is in hospital, also has declared emphatically for Lloyd George.

Mrs. Lloyd George Busy House Hunting

London, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Lloyd George has been forced to join the unhappy throng of seekers after habitations in this crowded city.

Today she was looking for a house in the Westminster district, and she must get it quickly, for the retiring Premier's family wishes to vacate No. 10 Downing street tomorrow, if possible, to make room for the new Prime Minister.

In this installment she tells of the three other girls who live with the young idealist Garland on April Farm, despite a Ku Klux warning addressedd to "Charles Garland and Harlots," as related Saturdday.

ing Charles Garland's stove she When Doris finished polish- took me to the "Chicken Coop" and gave me a pair of her khaki trousers and a warm slip-on sweater.

"Now you'll feel more like working," she said. That seems to be one of the favorite sports on April Farm. Everybody works and works hard.

The chicken coop is a long low building through which the chill October winds whistle like the first act in "Way Down East." It is only a few feet high at the eaves and even down the centre it is barely six feet in height.

One-third of the coop has been partitioned off into a bedroom. It is here that Alice Edgerton sleeps. The rest of the shack is fitted up as a kitchen and living room. The door to the coop is so low that Barley, on entering it, bends exactly in half. He can only stand erect when he is in the exact centre of the room. This doesn't seem to inconvenience him a bit. He seldom enters the shack without sprawling at once on the floor.

SHE MEETS ANNA.

Doris introduced me to a small bob-haired girl who was lying on the cot in the "living room."

She was dressed like the others, in khaki breeches and black sweater. She was lying on her back with her feet comfortably parked against the roof. Her name is Anna.

Presently another girl entered the shack. I recognized her at once by her pig-tail. Alice Edgerton is the only one of the April Farm ladies who refuses to be shorn of her locks. Her waist-long braid flaps behind her as she goes about her household duties or walks briskly about the farm gathering the beets or feeding the fowl.

She wears a pair of silver-rimmed, over-the-ear spectacles on a most determined nose. She reminds one of a teacher of Higher Mathematics roughing it through the Rockies.

Alice at once sat down on the floor beside two heaping baskets of cranberries. These she started to "look over," as a preliminary to canning them for the Winter. Anna roused herself from the cot and sat down beside Alice.

STORY OF "BOILED BABY."

"What does thee like best to do?" Alice asked me, looking up at me with a kindly smile.

"To write stories," I told her.

"What kind of stories? About what?"

I told her that I didn't know exactly, but that I liked tragic stories the best.

"Would thee like to hear the story of the boiled baby?" she asked. (Alice Edgerton is a Quakeress and uses quaint form of the pronoun.)

I thought she was making fun of me and I turned quickly to look at her. She was looking me straight in the eye, and was not laughing. I soon found out that the people at April Farm do not amuse themselves at the expense of others. Except Harriet. And she didn't really "belong." I'll tell you about her later.

"I did think it was so tragic," Alice continued, dolefully. "Anna can tell you that it was true. We were both working at the same day-nursery in New York. And somebody—we never found out who—put one of the babies in too hot a bath and went off and left it. It boiled to death."

GAVE AWAY HER POEMS

"I don't like that story much," I told Alice. By this time I was on my knees with the others, sorting cranberries. Doris had gone to "separate" the milk.

"Maybe thee would like the story of K. P.," she tried again. "She is a friend of mine, a young girl with a great gift. She believes as we do that when God blesses us with a gift we must not turn about and try to sell it. What she has she gives away.

"She is a singer of songs, this friend of mine," continued Alice. "She writes beautiful little poems. She could sell them if she wanted to; her poetay is recognaized by poetry magazines and societies everywhere. But she believes in giving her poems away.

"So she prints them and binds them and her sister does the artistic decorations on them and her brother helps her with the printing. And then she gives them to everybody she thinks might want them. Would thee like to see the book?"

Alice jumped up and ran into the bed-room for the book of poems.

"Mine she bound with a piece of linen that my great-grandmother spun on an old loom,Alice explained.

The poems were little bits of free verse which all told stories of "questing for the truth," offering encouragement and love to other "questers," and sympathy for those for whom "cold and hunger had put out the light."

There was an idealism throughout the poems that is reflected in the whole attitude of everybody at April Farm.

"Katherine lived on four dollars a week while she was preparing the book," Alice told me.

"Where did she get the four dollars?"

"She went out and did a washing and ironing one day a week," said Alice. "That was the only work she felt that she could honestly do and keep her convictions.

"It was hard work, but she did it so that others might be 'singers of songs.' She never ate anything but cream of wheat. Now she's writing another book, and it is going to be even bigger than this one."

The discussion was interrupted by the return of Charles Garland from North Carver, where he had been for the mail.

As Barley opened the chicken coop door and, bending double, entered, I saw the color mount in Doris Benson's cheeks. And for a moment the sad look left her eyes.

Finding the Right Man

It is just as difficult—if not more so—for the employer to find the right man as it is for a man to find the right work. That is, it's difficult by the ordinary method.

If, however, the employer and employe alike seek the same channel, mutually profitable meetings are assured.

That's briefly the reason for the success of American Want Ads. They voice the wants and offerings of Boston's ablest citizenship. And they bring together the man and the task most congenial to each other.

That's why it will pay you to follow the "Help Wanted" ads closely. And that's why a Want Ad of your own will shorten and make surer your search. When ready, leave with, or clined to discuss details of the merry row which resulted in the arrest of Dailey and Zibutis.

From information already in the hands of the police, however, it appears that Dailey invaded the apartment and alleged to be a policeman. In the argument that followtd Dailey was thrown out.

According to the story told the police, the chorus girls and the two men from the show were sitting in the apartment talking over the evening's performance when the trouble began.

While they were talking a rap is said to have been made on the door. One of the girls opened the door, the police say, and found Zibutis, the janitor, standing there. Zibutis explained to the girls, they claim, that a police officer was outside demanding admission.

CAFEMAN'S DEATH IS MYSTERY

Probe Demise of Lunchroom Official Found Lying Lifeless in His Room

George Harvey, assistant manager of a Walton lunch, at No. 108 Boylston street, was found mysteriously dead today, half in and half out of bed, in the rooms he shared, at No. 393 Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, with T. J. O'Donnell, clerk in a chain grocery.

O'Donnell told the police he awakened at 6:30 to find Harvey lifeless with the upper half of his body out of bed and his head resting in a pool of blood on the floor. It was later reported that there was a bruise on Harvey's nose.

DRANK BAD LIQUOR.

O'Donnell said that he, Harvey and a third man were motoring the night before, drank some poor whiskey, returned to the Massachusetts avenue suite and had two rounds more of liquor. Then O'Donnell and the visiting friend went out, leaving Harvey in the suite.

O'Donnell said he returned at 1 a.

Fifteen Died to Amuse One Firebug

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 23.—Albert F. Molnar, thirty-three, was turned over to the New York police today by the police of Bayonne, N. J., where he was arrested on suspicion of having started the fire in an apartment house at Lexington avenue and street Sunday in which fifteen people lost their lives.

Molnar, according to the Bayonne police, at first said he was a member of a gang of incendiaries that had headquarters in the basement of a negro church in East Ninety-seventh street.

He told them, police declared, that he and other members had fired the Lexington avenue apartment just to see it burn. Later Molnar denied knowing anything about the fire.

Police are convinced the fire was the work of a pyromaniac. The death list was increased to fifteen today when Mrs. Rose Ingleso died in a hospital from burns. At least half a dozen persons are still missing. More than a score of injured are in hospitals.

IMPERILS 25 LIVES IN MALDEN

Men, Women and Children in Terror From Four Weeks of Fires

Malden police made investigation today of the sixth attempt in four weeks of a firebug to destroy the three-story Hall block on Linden square, Malden, which houses twenty-five men, women and little children.

The police expect to make an arrest within twenty-four hours.

The ground floor contains stores, with tenements on the upper floors. Philip Gonnazaro discovered this sixth fire. He saw smoke coming from the rear. He found two barrels of rubbish on fire under a rear stairway.

Gonnazaro ran up the front stairs, rousing tenants. Parents picked up their babies and fled, all getting out safely. Firemen quickly put out the fire, with damage estimated at $200.

This fire has increased the terror of the tenants, also the mystery as to the firebug's motive. There was a report that the attempts were because Mr. Hall, the landlord, had raised rents.

But this theory went flat when it developed that the first two fires took place previous to the rent raise.

100,000 WELSH COAL MINERS PLAN STRIKE

Cardiff, Wales, Oct. 23 (By International News Service)—On top of the political crisis Great Britain was threatened today with another gigantic outbreak of labor troubles. One hundred thousand Welsh miners gave notice through their leaders they would strike within two weeks unless their union was recognized. Such a strike would tie up all the Welsh coal fields.

"JOKER" IN PROPOSED MOVIE CENSORSHIP BILL DISCOVERED

WEALTHY FILM FAN FAVORED

The "joker" in the proposed censorship bill has been discovered.

The bill, if accepted, will make it "unlawful for any person to exhibit or display PUBLICLY" motion picture films that have not been inspected and approved by the censor.

Nothing at all is said of pictures that are shown PRIVATELY.

In other words, the wealthy man, with his own theatre, can invite his friends to see any kind of a picture that he can buy, and in some countries the pictures are far from "polite." While the average working man and his family are forced to watch films that have been ripped wide open and patched up by the Censor, the "aristocrat" in his palace can indulge to the limit in rotten films, if he so desires.

And the law will not do anything about it.

Likewise, nothing in the proposed law deals with clubs or societies that show immoral pictures, in private.

The present law makes no distinction between publicly and privately displayed films and all connected with the display are liable to fines and imprisonment. And yet, advocates of censorship declare that present laws are inadequate.

Once again, it will be the man who is least able to stand the added strain of taxation who will be hit hardest, if movie censorship is adopted in Massachusetts.

Get into the Boston American's fight now. Send in your ideas. Three prizes, $250, $100 and $50 are given for the best letters. Here is the chance to earn a good prize and do your State a favor at the same time. Act now.

Here is a letter:

ATTEMPT TO MISLEAD.

Editor Boston American:

The censorship of Moving Pictures is another coal added to the fire, which eventually is going to make the pot boil over.

This referendum has been worded so as to mislead the voter and numbers will vote "yes" on it while being opposed to it. The Shepard-Towner Bill, which will control the schools the way a few want them controlled, Anti-tobacco legislation, Birth Control, the Ku Klux Klan, meddling in the Far East controversy—all these and more are a part of a heavily financed and careful program.

Under their censorship plan we shall see the beautiful results that were attained by tarring and feathering a man who was found talking to a Jew, a Catholic and a Negro. We shall see the emaciated, horrible speciment of humanity who used tobacco. We shall see the pale, wan, tottering woman who had more than one child. And the big feature picture will be the ravings and distortions of the poor lost soul in the delirium tremens after he had drunk one whole bottle of old-time four and one-half per cent. Budweiser beer.

Yours for an emphatic "No" vote on referendums Nos. 3 and 4.

Censor a Public Menace W. J. Walsh Declares

MOVING pictures today afford entertainment and pleasure to a vast majority of people because they give the housewife, the domestic and the laborer the same opportunity as the professional man and the family of the wealthy.

WILLIAM J. WALSH.

I am opposed to censorship because it would be in opposition to the independent spirit of our constitution, which affords liberal opportunity to all. The present law is entirely adequate and it seems to me sufficient for the purpose of regulating such entertainment so as, to keep the pictures clean and uphold the morals of the community.

I am opposed to censorship, also because I believe it would be an autocratic power placed in the hands of one man and would be against the interests of the mass of people who are at present satisfied with the conduct of this entertainment.

By William J. Walsh Member of the City Council and brother of United States Senator David I. Walsh.

CITIZENS FEAR PREJUDICE IN FILMCENSOR

Up, up, up goes the tide of opposition to movie censorship in Massachusetts. The factory girl, the stenographer, the clerk, the salesman, the student, all keenly interested in the welfare of their State, are proclaiming loudly against this bill.

The small minority that is supporting the bill is getting smaller each day. Who composes this minority, aside from the leaders, is a mystery for none have been found through the business section of the city.

Here is what some more opponents to censorship declare:

Miss Nathalie Cooke, Manchester-by-the-Sea: "I believe that pictures should be supervised, but I do not think it necessary to appoint a censor. There is plenty of supervision, between Will Hays and the National Board of Review, without adding any State censor. I would not like to see good pictures spoiled simply because certain parts of it did not appeal to the personal taste of the censor. Censoring moving pictures is one thing, at least, that might well be left to the public."

Nathalie Cooke

Miss Frances Roope, 49 Dearborn street, Salem: "The producers are doing their part to make our moving better, and we should co-operate with them instead of putting obstacles in their way in the form of a censor. It would only be human for a censor to reject a picture for personal reasons, forgetting for the time that he was being paid to render impartial decisions, as a judge in a court of law. I do not feel that there is a need for a censor."

Frances Roope

TRAINMEN'S LODGE AGAINST FILM CENSOR

Bunker Hill Lodge No. 404, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, has unanimously endorsed a resolution in opposition to the censorship bill, and pledging the organization, individually and collectively, to work for the defeat of Referendum No. 3 at the forthcoming election. Notice of this action has been received by P. H. Jennings, secretary of the Boston Central Labor Union.

"DOLLAR DAY" IN DRIVE FO RHOSPITAL

Today is "Dollar Day" in the drive for funds for the Children's Hospital. The final appeal for $100,000 to carry on the worthy work of this institution is made today.

The success or failure of the drive depends on "Dollar Day" and the work of mercy among sick children must be reduced if the drive in behalf of the institution is not successful.

All who have not been approached are urged to drop their mite in "dollar boxes" placed in all Liggett drug stores throughout Greater Boston through the courtesy of Louis K. Liggett.

MARION DAVIES

MORE than a million and a half dollars have been spent in making "When Knighthood Was in Flower," the greatest picture of all times. It sets a new and vivid standard in the annals of photoplays. Thousands of actors, a king's ransom of antique jewels, perfectly reproduced period costumes and the most beautiful settings ever conceived by Joseph Urban, form the background for the stirring scenes enacted by the most distinguished group of actors ever called together in a motion picture drama. This picture, in recreating medieval history, is also creating history in the film art.

For six weeks it has been playing to the capacity of the Criterion Theatre, New York, with thousands actually turned away at every performance.

Slain Choir Singer Sought Advice of Sister on Her Strange Love Tangle

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 23.—At the request of Supreme Court Justice Parker the Attorney-General's Department today assumed charge of the investigation of the Hall-Mills murder case. Attorney-General McCran deputized Wilbur A. Mott of Essex County as Deputy Attorney-General in charge. Mr. Mott will begin his duties immediately.

(Copyright, 1922, by International News Service.)

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 23.—The revelation that Mrs. Eleanor Mills was troubled over her clandestine romance with Dr. Edward Wheeler Hall, rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, and sought the advice of a sister on her tangled love affairs, was made to International News Service today by Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, the sister who lives in Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. Barnhardt told how Mrs. Mills had come to her during the latter part of August, barely two weeks before the double murder, and discussed her relations with Dr. Hall.

SOUGHT SISTER'S ADVICE.

"My sister came over here and had a talk with me on her affair with Dr. Hall," Mrs. Barnhardt said. "She wanted to confide her marital troubles to me. My sister told me that she was infatuated with the rector. She wanted advice. I reminded her that she was older than I, and told her she didn't need to be told that what she was doing was not right. I reminded her that she had a husband and two children and that people frowned on that sort of thing. I said to her: 'You are living a lie. Nothing good can come of it.'

"She continued talking about her feeling for Dr. Hall and his feeling for her. I made it plain to her that I did not approve of what she was doing. I told her again: 'Eleanor, you are living a lie; nothing good can come of it.'

CASE BEFORE GRAND JURY.

"My husband, Frank, was with me at the time. We were sitting on the porch of my home here. Eleanor then appealed to my husband:

"'You are married, Frank,' she said to him. 'Now if you met someone you really loved, would you let someone stand in the way of your happiness?'"

Herr Barnhardt interposed:

"I told her I didn't think it was possible for me to meet anyone I loved better than my wife," he put in. "I told her that it was impossible for me for that reason to answer her question."

Prosecutor Azariah Beekman of Somerset County was expected to lay the evidence in the murder case before the Grand Jury today. At the same time detectives on his staff were busy rounding up new and old witnesses for examination at a secret headquarters, where most witnesses have been taken recently, in an effort to avoid the many newspapermen working on the case.

Great interest was manifested by authorities in a report that the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, slain rector of the Episcopal Church of St. John the Evangelist, once employed a private detective to curb the activities of a man who Mrs. Eleanor Rheinhardt Mills, choir leader killed with the clergyman, had complained was annoying her.

OTHER WOMAN IN CASE.

An inquiry was begun today, also, of the report that another woman was involved in the love complications of Dr. Hall and that he visited her alone in a Manhattan apartment.

Authorities have learned that Dr. Hall sent a telegram to this woman early in August. It read: "Will be at your apartment late this evening." Western Union officials have declined to turn a copy of the message over to the authorities without a court order.

Both reports were said to be supported by documentary evidence and left doubt that both Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills had other admirers, who might be able to throw light on the mystery.

It was learned that Prosecutor Stricker of Middlesex County has for the past two weeks been attempting to obtain copies of other telegrams said to have been sent by the dead clergyman to this same New York woman.

Copies of the messages are said to be in the possession of the local telegraph office.

New York, Oct. 23.—In the amazing collection of correspondence as written by the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall to Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills there are many postcards that reveal the clergyman's heart-history.

Today the American reveals the text of a series of four cards written by the lovestruck clergyman to his beloved choir singer. The cycle of four cards contains one continuous message of love.

The cards showed on their picture sides first, a view of Seal Harbor, near where he and Mrs. Hall were spending a vacation in August; Jordan's Pond, Seal Harbor; the town of Seal Harbor and a picture of the postoffice at Seal Harbor, where the Rev. Mr. Hall sent and received secret love-mail.

"Alone With You"

"MY OWN DEAR WONDER HEART—It is Tuesday morning (10 a. m.) and I am in Seal Harbor starting for a walk—all by myself—but you are with me. Oh darling it is so very good to be alone with you. I love to be alone as I am as much as I can be—for then we are everything to each other. I will write more of my letter soon. Let Charlotte play the organ ALL SHE WANTS TO—I love to have her play & we may need her help some time so ask her to play often—use the lights—just as long as you want to. I love to know that you are at the church—oh your wonderful comforting letters—you DO write what I need—crave & I am NEVER disappointed when I go to the P. O.

"I got the sweet peas at the Jordan Pond house—I don't suppose people are supposed to pick them but I always take a deep red for my gypsy. I will get one today as I expect to end my walk up there.

Dearest, send your last letter to me SATURDAY—at Seal H—then I will get it Tuesday. Your Sunday letters do not come until Wednesday & I leave here Wednesday a. m. Then I reach Boston Thursday morning & leave there Thursday night—reaching N. Y. Friday morning.

"Expect to reach N. B. about Friday noon & I will come to 49 early Friday afternoon & we can go for a walk Friday night—oh happy days to dream of. I will write steadily to you until I get back—dearest the whole heart's love of D. T. L. to his precious wonder heart."

Time Drags on Him

The Rev. Mr. Hall, in today's instalment of his remarkable love diary, complains in his longing for his beloved choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills:

"Will these days EVER pass until I hold you close again?"

The love diary tells how the minister took mountain climbs with an image of his beloved in his heart.

The clergyman reveals how he whistled romantic ballads while he plodded up hill through the air that was "clear and strong today—like our love."

Thursday, Aug. 17.—Another of Maine's wonderful clear days—my darling—the atmosphere was so wonderfully clear that a party was formed to climb Western Mt.—we left at 10 for S. W. Harbor—took an auto to the foot of the mountain—had lunch on top—and returned, reaching Islesford at 6:15—another tired night—so am taking a hot bath to take out the soreness in the muscles and turning in early—good night, dear darling heart. I whistled "Where Are You Now" and "Romance of Your Eyes" as we went up the mountain—you were with me every moment—the air clear and strong today—like our love—

The "Living Sacrifice"

Friday, Aug. 18—What a contrast to yesterday, my dear—late last night we had a thunder shower and that changed the atmosphere—fog set in this morning—it was so thick I gave up thought of going to Seal Harbor for mail—so sent off Parish post cards and waited for this afternoon—then the fog was worse than ever—so I shall have to wait until tomorrow and I KNOW those letters are there. Blessed heart, I know that when I get back to N. B. I shall not want to be out of your sight for ONE MOMENT. How wonderful our love is! How it has grown even in these three weeks—I feel that it is richer, deeper—stronger—more perfect than ever—the truth of the 'living sacrifice' is my Rock of Ages—

Saturday, Aug. 19.—Dear dear heart—all those precious letters that I received at Seal Harbor this morning! Dearest your letters have been marvelous—so true calm, strong, the very reflection of yourself—I can feel you thro' and thro' every one of them—I had to make a purpose to get to Seal today so suggested a trip to Bar Harbor—we got to Seal then take a boat to Bar Harbor—over there we did a few errands and I tried to get the "indian love lyrics" of Laurence Hope—no luck—will try in Boston—later we finished up at Jordan Pond & I got another letter on my way back from there—good night beloved mine! You will be writing your last letter to me today—will those days ever pass until I hold you close again?

(Further letters of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and notations in his amazing love diary will appear in the American.)

LOCK UP JURY IN GETTIGAN DEATH CASE

The jurors in the trial of J. Thomas Gettigan of Revere, charged with poisoning his aunt, Lizzie M. Cook, were ordered locked up by Judge Dubuque of the Superior Court, at recess today.

This action was taken after ten jurors had been chosen, the government exercising nineteen challenges and the defense thirteen. Twenty-eight jurors were excused because they had formed opinions, two for sickness and one for prejudice.

The last three jurors chosen before recess were No. 8, Winfield S. Wales, insurance, No. 62 Hastings street; No. 9, J. Martin Towle, foreman, No. 61 Fulton street, and No. 10, John J. Vortisch, hairdresser, No. 31 Claybourne street.

AGAINST DEATH PENALTY.

Everett G. Redlon, traffickman, of No. 496 Bennington street, said he was opposed to capital punishment because his native State, Maine, once hanged an innocent man.

Walter L. Murray, cigarmaker, of No. 68 Circuit street, said he had formed an opinion of the guilt of the defendant as a result of reading and discussing newspaper stories. Judge Dubuque warned the jurors to disregard what Murray had said.

Frank J. Cahill, clerk, of No. 63 Bartlett street, was opposed to capital punishment in all cases where the evidence was circumstancial.

Albert E. MacFarlane, a baker, of of No. 1525 Blue Hill avenue, said he was prejudiced as a result of discussing newspaper stories of the case.

GETTIGAN IS CALM.

The prosecution is being handled by Assistant District Attorney Maurice Caro and Frank S. Deland. Gettigan is represented by Roscoe Wallsworth, former Mayor of Revere, and Martin Gilbert.

Gettigan seemed unmoved when he was taken into court and placed in the cage. His wife disassociated herself from a group of friends, went up to the cage and kissed her husband.

Gettigan was arrested last February, charged with murder in the first degree. Mrs. Cook's body had been exhumed and traces of arsenic found. In the first trial of Gettigan the jury disagreed.

Seven jurors had been picked, up to noon. They are: Thomas F. Sheedy, a salesman of No. 70 Dudley street; Orrin G. Brackett, an engineer of No. 538 Newbury street; John J. Halloran, a machinist of No. 26 Huckins street; Thomas F. Flynn, a motorman of No. 4 Palfrey street; David B. Moore, a foreman of No. 2 Jones avenue, Chelsea; James H. Spencer, a salesman of No. 88 Regent street, and Roderick J. Chisholm, a salesman of No. 17 Hubbard road.

CAMBRIDGE MAN PINNED UNDER AUTO AFLAME

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 23.—In a successful effort to avoid a collision with another car, Thomas Stratton of Cambridge, today had the narrowest escape from death on record in these parts.

In trying to avoid hitting a truck on the Lafayette road near here, Stratton's car skidded. He had been going at a fast pace, with the result the car not only made a complete circle in the road, but turned over, pinned Stratton beneath it and burst into flames.

He was all alone in the car and there was nobody else on the road to help.

"I don't know how I ever managed to extricate myself from the wreckage and escape death by burning," he said.

There had been a heavy fog along the road, which was slippery and treacherous.

"I'm glad the car is wrecked," said Stratton. "There's no insurance, but this is the third time I've had an accident with this wagon, and it looks to me like a hoodoo."

There was only a cut on his face and a bruise on one leg to show that Stratton had been in an accident.

GOVERNOR BAXTER OPPOSES NAVY DAY

Augusta, Me., Oct. 23.—Governor Percival P. Baxter of Maine has refused to indorse "Navy Day," saying:

"The American Navy is and always has been the pride of our nation. Its personnel cannot be surpassed; I doubt if it can be equaled the world over.

"At present, however, I believe it unnecessary and unwise to bring our Navy into prominence, when within the year under President Harding and Secretary Hughes' great leadership a solemn agreement has been made by the leading naval powers to reduce naval armaments and to establish a naval holiday."

Stop for 10 Days

Stop brushing teeth in ineffective ways

See what new beauty this new way brings

Nearly all the world over, leading dentists are advising people to brush teeth in a new way. Millions of people now do it every day.

You see the results wherever you look. Teeth now glisten which once were dim. Women have new charm, new beauty. They show teeth when they smile.

This is to urge all other people to try this method now. Your druggist will present you with a ten-day tube. Cease your old methods for a few days and see what this new way does.

Why teeth look dingy

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. You feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Food stains, etc., discolor it. So that film, if left, soon forms the basis of thin dingy coats. Tartar is based on film.

No ordinary tooth paste can effectively combat it. So millions of teeth brushed daily were clouded more or less.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Film forms a breeding place for germs. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

All these troubles were constantly increasing. Very few escaped. The tooth brush, used in old ways, left much film intact.

The war on film

Dental science then began a war on film. After long research, two effective film combatants were discovered. Able authorities amply proved their efficiency. Then they were announced, and since then leading dentists everywhere have been urging their adoption.

One acts to curdle film, one to remove it. And this is done in scientific ways, not by harmful scouring.

A new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research. It brings other new results now considered essential. It avoids several old mistakes. In this tooth paste are embodied these two great film combatants. The name of the tooth paste is Pepsodent.

Two other new effects

Pepsodent brings two other effects which research proves essential. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is Nature's neutralizer for the acids which cause decay.

It was found that tooth pastes based on soap and chalk brought just opposite effects. That is one reason why they proved so ineffective. They reduced the tooth-protecting agents which Pepsodent increases many fold.

These results mean a new dental era. They mean that your children need not suffer what you suffered from your teeth. They mean that film-coats can be combated.

A few-day test will prove this to you. Make that test in fairness to yourself.

Some Fifty Nations

Use this new way now

Careful people of some fifty nations now use Pepsodent, largely by dental advice. To millions of women it has brought new charm, new beauty. To men of many races it has brought teeth they love to show. To children it has brought protections which your childhood did not know.

Present the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. What you see and feel will very soon convince you. You will be delighted and amazed. Cut out this coupon so you won't forget, for this test is important.

WOMAN BADLY BEATEN MAY LOSE LIFE

Mrs. Mary Slater, thirty-eight years old, of No. 74 George street, Roxbury, is on the danger list at the City Hospital, following a terrible beating said to have been administered by a Dorchester man early today.

The woman's jaw is fractured, her lip is cut open and she is believed to have a fractured skull. Police are investigating. They have procured a warrant for the man who is believed to have committed the assault.

The beating, the police say, took place in a room in the rear of No. 65 George street. The woman is said to work at that place in a rug shop in the front of the building. What she was doing there early this morning the police have been unable to learn definitely. George E. Morrison of that address told the police that he was awakened from his sleep by the battle between the woman and a man in his kitchen. The man fled and he called the police.

Mrs. Slater is said to have two children in Brighton.

IF YOU CAN'T GET A ROOM, TELL CURLEY

Tessa Kosta, pretty prima donna, has tried for ten days past to make a reservation at some Boston hotel. She wrote, wired and phoned from New York, but nothing doing. All rooms were taken for the National Convention of Surgeons.

She sent a telegram addressed to the Mayor of Boston telling him her troubles and adding:

"You are the father of the city. If I am to sing for you in 'The Rose of Stamboul' for the next two weeks I must have a place to live." The answer flashed back to New York:

"Come ahead. You'll get the best there is."

Miss Kosta alighted at the Back Bay station this morning while the committee of welcome awaited her at the South Station. Eventually they found her parked on the sidewalk surrounded by her bags and baggage, and escorted her to the Copley-Plaza. It is suspected that two eminent surgeons may sleep on billiard tables there tonight.

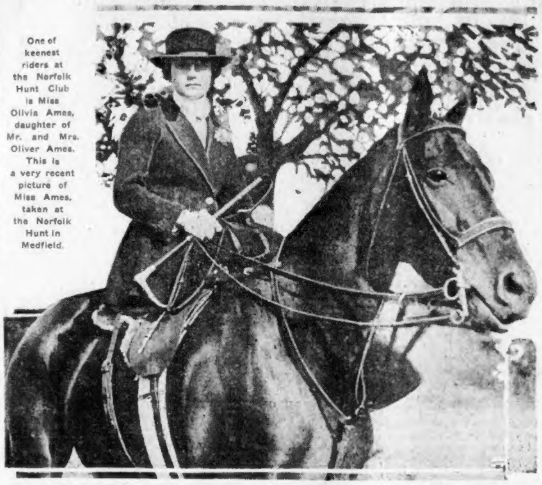
Sport Loving Set All on Hand at Myopia Hunt Steeplechases, Says Betty Alden



One of keenest riders at the Norfolk Hunt Club is Miss Olivia Ames, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ames. This is a very recent picture of Miss Ames, taken at the Norfolk Hunt in Medfield.

MISS OLIVIA AMES, PROMINENT IN NORFOLK HUNT SET.

By BETTY ALDEN.

SCARLET hunting coats, smart sport hats, gorgeous fur wraps, tan polo coats, gaily-colored sport skirts, more scarlet hunting coats, and the green, red, yellow, purple and orange shirts and sashes worn by the riders themselves, all helped to enliven the landscape last Saturday at Willowdale.

For it was Saturday that the Myopia Hunt Club held its steeplechase at Bradley W. Palmer's Topsfield estate, and verily was it a smart event, informal though it was. The clans of Rice, Mandell, Sears, Ayer and Proctor were all there, along with the others who make the North Shore the notable sporting centre it is.

"Eleo" Sears was there, a symphony in gray, with her roomy lamb coat over a gray sport suit, with a light gray hat to complete the costume. Her two attractive cousins were there, Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr. (Phyllis Sears), who wore her black riding habit, and Mrs. Bayard Warren, the former "Lily" Sears. The latter was looking as smart as ever in a light polo coat trimmed with opossum collar and cuffs, a brown sport skirt and a brown felt hat with a long pheasant feather.

One of the most popular of the Lee girls was there, Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Jr. (Bessie Lee), a tall, slender brunette. She wore a black gown and hat, her simple costume enriched by a loose cape of squirrel fur.

Mrs. Hendricks Hallett Whitman wore an all-brown sport costume, with shoes, skirt, coat and small hat all matching—and carried a cane. The former Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor is usually the cynosure of all eyes wherever she goes, and Saturday's event was no exception, for the smartness of her apparel is always evident. She has a tall, slim figure and is really rather stunning looking.

Mrs. A. Lynde Cochrane was there, wearing a beaver coat and a black hat which boasted a huge bow in front. It will be remembered that Mrs. Cochrane played the part of Polly Peters, the heroine of "Why Not?" written by the one-time Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, and presented by society last March.

A very youthful matron there was Mrs. Joseph B. Hoyt, Jr.—she used to be Alice Seabury—who also wore a beaver coat and a black hat trimmed with a golden bow. I saw her talking for a while with pretty blue-eyed Mrs. Lloyd Nichols, the former Helen Hart.

Petite Mary Weld was in the throng, looking as trim as ever in a tan skirt and hat and a short seal coat. If her "pal," Miss Ella Snelling, was there, I did not see her.

Following the races there was a drag hunt for the confirmed "saddle addicts," and later on Mr. Palmer, the master of Willowdale, gave a hunt breakfast. It was certainly a "big day" for the Shore, many coming down from town for the races and staying on for the Simpkins-Fenno nuptials in the afternoon and the dance at the Myopia Hunt Club in the evening.

AS "Mim" Fenno walked down the aisle of St. John's Church, Beverly Farms, upon the arm of her father, J. Brooks Fenno, there were audible murmurs of "Isn't she lovely!"

Her gown was of white satin, simply cut, and trimmed with rare bits of point d'esprit lace. The long tulle veil, caught with a cluster of orange blossoms, nearly covered the square court train. She carried a large bouquet of Easter lilies.

The gowns of the bride's attendants—the Misses Pauline Fenno, Katherine Abbott, Elinor Jackson, Sybil Appleton, Katherine Lane, Barbara Foster and Mabel Coats—were of a beautiful orange velvet, and their hats of brown lace.

John Simpkins—I forgot to mention that he was the bridegroom—was attended as best man by Willard S. Simpkins, who came on from New York for the occasion. The corps of twelve ushers was made up mostly from the groom's Harvard '12 class.

A VERY youthful looking matron was the bride's mother, who was escorted to her seat by her son, J. Brooks Fenno, Jr. Mrs. Fenno, who was formerly Miss Mary Thorndike, wore a gown of black, its waist and long sash of warm red-orange silk and plumed hat of the same shade. Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins, mother of the groom, was gowned in plum colored velvet, with hat to match. Her daughter-in-law, Mrs. "Nat" Simpkins, Jr., (Olivia Thorndike), was most distinctively gowned in a costume entirely of white, which set off most effectively her rich brunette coloring. Her frock was of white crepe de chine, over which she wore an ermine scarf. Her large brimmed white hat was trimmed with the same fur.

Others in the church were Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw, Harold J. Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Nichols, Mrs. Joseph Hoyt, Jr., Mrs. Gordon Abbott and Miss Alice Thorndike.

FINDS WIFE WITH BOY, KILLS HER

Fresno, Cal., Oct. 23.—Justifiable homicide was the verdict returned today by the coroner's jury that inquired into the death of Mrs. Clara Harlow, nineteen, whose husband, George A. Harlow, thirty, an electrician, was said to have clubbed her to death with a shotgun near their home at Northfork when he found her in the company of a young man of her age.

Harlow declared his wife, who was not expecting him, was with a nineteen-year-old youth. Mrs. Harlow and her visitor fled the house, the husband said. The latter seized a shotgun and started in pursuit. He fired one shot at her, but the charge went wild. Overtaking her, he is alleged to have struck her repeatedly on the head. Her skull was crushed.

The youth who was said to have been visiting Mrs. Harlow later was taken into custody.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND COMMENT

By FREDERICK JOHN

"THE entire motion picture industry owes a vote of thanks to William Randolph Hearst for giving such a wonderful picture as 'When Knighthood Was in Flower,' now at the Criterion Theatre, to the public at this particular time," declared William Brandt, founder and president emeritus of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, just before the weekly meeting of that organization at the Hotel Astor, New York.

"The motion picture business is just coming out of a depression, which was probably the worst in the history of the industry," continued Mr. Brandt. Not only were general economic conditions bad, but for various reasons the public was being weaned away from the picture theatre. To tell the truth, we have been getting a lot of terrible pictures, and I do not blame the public for getting tired of them."

WORK AND GROW THIN.

PAT O'MALLEY walked into the Goldwyn studio the other day twenty-five pounds lighter than when he acted in Peter B. Kyne's "Brothers Under the Skin," in which he was supposed to be oversized. When asked how he did it, Pat told a story that may help the vast army of reducers. In the first place, he is rebuilding with his own hands a 1912 automobile which, he declares, he will turn into a custom-built model with $10,000 worth of looks. Second, there is a new baby at Pat's house to keep four-year Eileen company. Third, the maid walked out, and the actor automatically became the man-of-all-work around the house.

That's how Pat cut off the adipose tissue. And he says he likes it.

VILLAIN IS PORTLY.

HUGHIE MACK, long renowned as fat comedian, has been seized upon by Rex Ingram in his latest production for Metro, "Trifling Women," to play the part of villain. This amazing metamorphosis is to be effected through the simple mustache, which lends to Hughie's rotund countenance a cast of peculiar malevolence and cruelty. "Trifling Women" is a story written by Rex Ingram himself, set in France, and revolving about a group of queer and startling characters.

BELGIUM AND FRANCE CUT DEBT $500,000

Washington, Oct. 23.—Aside from the interest payments of the foreign debts received this month from Great Britain, the treasury was able to credit something over $500,000 to the accounts of Belgium and France.

The Belgian item was an interest payment of approximately $460,000 on account of materials purchased from the War Department, while the French credit was $111,000 paid into the treasury by the Railroad Administration in satisfaction of a claim of the French government against that administrion.

"Pieces of Eight"

Long John Silver's parrot screamed "Pieces of Eight" from his corner of the cook's galley on that famous ship bound for Treasure Island. His master was plotting to get the Spanish silver dollars, or "pieces of eight," which had belonged to the pirate Flint.

"Pieces of eight," which you frequently hear on our second floor, lacks the sinister significance of the parrot's cry. It, too, however, is applied to silver.

Young married couples and others rarely give dinners or luncheons to more than eight people, so their friends and relatives, in giving them flat silver for their table, choose "pieces for eight." Six are hardly enough, and while twelve are more satisfactory, the additional cost sometimes curtails the variety of the selection.

On our second floor you will find on display the best new and old designs of silver. You may buy one piece at a time or a chestful, as you wish. Each single piece has the same skilled workmanship and carefully developed proportions.

VILLA PICKED TO WIN OVER EDWARDS IN ARENA BOUT

FINE FIGHTING CARD ON TAP FOR FANS

By JACK CONWAY.

Pancho Villa, world's flyweight champion, will try to punch his way to a victory over Danny Edwards, colored bantamweight champion, in a ten-round bout at the Arena A. C.'s show at the Boston Arena tonight.

The youthful Filipino marvel who knocked out the great Johnny Buff in eleven rounds will make a mighty bid to crush the fighting spirit of Edwards by the knockout route.

Villa has been made a slight favorite in the betting. The chances are, though, that betting will be at even money at ring time.

A capacity crowd will witness the conflict. As there are now more than 6,000 seats at the Arena, there will be ample accommodations for all who wish to see the struggle.

It will be the first time since Johnny Wilson defended his title against George Robinson a year ago last Summer that a world's champion has battled for a decision in a Boston ring.

As Edwards is the world's colored bantamweight champion, it will be a meting between title holders. Even the oldest inhabitant does not remember when a similar battle was staged in a Boston ring.

Villa is a terific puncher and aggressive. Edwards a brilliant boxer and a sharp, clean puncher. This should mean that tonight's bout will be one of the most sensational affairs ever staged in Boston.

President Joe Goode of the Arena believes that Villa and Edwards will furnish as many thrills as Shevlin and Shade. Which is all that we could ask of any two ring warriors.

"I shall try for a knockout," was the confident statement of Villa as he arrived in Boston accompanied by Frank Churchill, his manager, and a former resident of this city.

"I like to fight," continued the little Filipino. "I shall go after Edwards with the same vigor and dash that I displayed in my winning bout with Johnny Buff. I am fast enough to get within the punching zone. And if I can hit a man, I can knock him out.

"After Edwards, I want Joe Lynch. Buff held the world's flyweight and bantamweight championships. I want to emulate him."

Churchill, the man who brought Villa to America, concurred with Villa.

Villa Has Punched His Way to World Fame

"A knockout; that's what we want tonight!"

And Churchill grinned good naturedly.

Probably he was thinking of the way Puncho Pancho battered Buff into submission under a fusillade of left and right blows.

Villa has done what the experts considered impossible. That's why the fans want to see him fight.

Puncho Pancho came to this country an unknown.

"Filipinos can't fight," said the wise men as Villa landed on our shores.

"We'll show 'em," said Churchill in true American fashion.

And they did.

Villa's sensational fighting in New York and New Jersey finally won for him a bout with Johnny Buff for the world's flyweight championship.

Buff figured that his superior boxing would enable him to outpoint Villa and at the opportune moment make it possible for him to smash through with a knockout blow.

But the American's plans miscarried. He had failed to reckon with Villa's aggressiveness and punching power.

You cannot stand off and box Puncho Villa. He won't let you. He piles in to close quarters and drives terrific punches to the head and body.

Johnny Buff Wilted in the Heavy Attack

Buff heard the cuckoos in the Villa's punches cause the cuckoos to sing in his opponent's ears.

eighth round. He was carried to his corner in the eleventh.

Puncho Pancho had come all the way from the Philippine Islands to the United States to fight. But it was worth it. He had won a world's championship.

"I'll meet all comers," said Villa after he defeated Buff.

He has kept his word.

Danny Edwards, colored bantamweight champion, is one of the greatest little men in the history of the ring. There are many fans who believe he would be able to defeat Joe Lynch, bantamweight king.

Another Filipino to Show in Semi-Final

George Moore has $30,000 which he is willing to wager that Edwards can beat Lynch. And the latter is remaining silent.

At the Arena tonight you will see these two champions, Villa and Edwards.

You will also see a real fight.

Edwards always impresses.

Villa does not know how to do anything but fight.

Which should satisfy.

Elino Inlores, another Filipino, will meet Tony Julian, of Brockton, in the semi-final of eight rounds. Louis Leonard, of the North End, and Steve Gustin, of South Boston, will battle eight frames. There will also be another eight-session affair.

Jack Conway Picks Puncho Pancho to Beat Edwards

Villa or Edwards? That's the problem that Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Arena A. C. has handed to Jack Conway. Here's Jack's answer:

"Villa, the wonder fighter of the ring, will win. Edwards will have a couple of pounds in weight on his side, but it will take more than two pounds of flesh to halt the surge of the sensational little fighter from the Philippines.

"Villa won the world's flyweight championship by knocking out Johnny Buff, and he isn't going to permit even a brilliant performer like Edwards to block his drive for the world's bantamweight crown.'

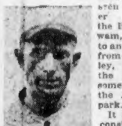
NICHOLSON GOES TO TOLEDO

No more will the popular Fred Nicholson be seen in the outer garden of the Braves' Wigwam, according to announcement from Eddie Riley, who is all the time doing something out in the Allston ball park.



Fred Nicholson.

It took a cash consideration for the Toledo Club of the American Association to secure the outfielder's release.

BILLY WOODS AND CARNEY IN BATTLE

Billy Woods of Medford, who fights very good as well as often, will have Billy Carney, of New Bedford, as an opponent in a bout at West Mystic, Conn., tonight. Woods could write a geography if he had the title. He certainly has visited enough places in his gay fistic career.

DUFFY LEWIS IS MANAGER AGAIN

Duffy Lewis, one-time star outfielder of the Red Sox, that was in the days of yore when one spent the day at the Fenway ball yard will remain in the West. Duffy will again manage the Salt Lake City Club it was definitely settled and sets a record, for no other manager has remained there in recent years more than a season.

COTTER TO TRY FOR KNOCKOUT

Tom Cotter, Quincy heavyweight, says he will knock out Pat McCarthy when he battles the Roxbury fighter at the Armory A. A. show at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night.

Cotter is one the heaviest hitters among the big fellows. At Revere last Summer he knocked Porky Flynn to the canvas. The Quincy warrior has piled up a long list of kayos as he has battered his way to the front ranks of his boxing division.

Tom Cotter

Cotter figures that if he can score with his heavy right that McCarthy will fade right out of the picture.

McCarthy has been training for the past two weeks and says he will hand Cotter a surprise at the Triple A's show.

There is also intense interest in the ten-round bout between Dutch Reagan of East Boston and Frankie Ryan of Everett. There is considerable rivalry between these two men, and they are sure to furnish a lively battle.

Billy Murphy, of Lowell, has been matched to meet Young Benny of the South End in an eight-round event. A large number of Lowell fans will make the trip to Boston to see their favorite in action.

Henry Ford of the North End and Johnny Curley of Roxbury will box in another eight-rounder.

The fact that the Armory Club will show only local boys has made a big hit with the fans, who are anxious to see real fighting.

LEAHY AND ADAIR IN WORCESTER GO

Tommy Leahy, Worcester County lightweight champion, has been obliged to step out of his class in order to keep busy. At Worcester Thursday night he will mingle with Barney Adair of New York, a welterweight. Although he will be batting under a heavy weight handicap, Leahy figures he will win.

Young Tansey

Young Tansey of Roxbury will be on the same card, meeting Charley Sheppard of Peabody in the semi-final of ten rounds.

SS. PETER AND PAULS WIN FROM ALL STARS

The SS. Peter and Paul A. A. of South Boston won their third victory of the season by defeating the Randolph All-Stars at the Randolph street playground 7 to 0 before 1,500 fans. The features of the game were O'Malley's forward passes to Flaherty for long gains and the fierce tackling of McGrath and Foley. Sampson was the best ground-gainer for the All-Stars.

B. C. MAKES READY FOR LAFAYETTE GAME

A record gathering is expected to fill Braves Field Saturday, when the strong Lafayette eleven will play Boston College. For two years, Coach Sutherland's Maroon and White warriors have not lowered their colors, although in the sixteen games they have won, some of the strongest teams in the East have been their opponents.

Two weeks ago, Lafayette defeated Pittsburg by a 7 to 0 score. Pittsburg's powerful eleven could not break down the veteran Lafayette line which has been invincible for two years. What Boston College will be able to do against this same line is the question which will be much discussed this week.

The Eagle line, which was none too strong, has been considerably weakened by the loss of Kozlowski at tackle. In the Detroit game, Kozlowski's arm was broken, which means that there is little chance that he will don the moleskins again this season.

Keahane will probably be shifted back to tackle. Lacking guard material, Coach Cavanaugh was forced to play Keahane at guard. Keahane played his new position well, and added much needed strength to the center of the line. If Keahane is moved out to tackle again, McManus or Donaghue will be assigned to guard.

McManus has been out of the game since the start of the season with injuries, and just now is getting back into form. He played end last Fall, and what his worth is at guard will be known before the Lafayette game.

Donoghue is another man who has the qualifications to play guard. Although this is his first year of college football, he made a good impression by his playing in the B. U. and Fordham games.

Captain Bill Kelleher Also Out of Game

Captain Bill Kelleher had his shoulder dislocated in the Detroit game, and he also will be out for the season. It will not be so hard to replace Kelleher, as Cavanaugh has plenty of backfield men. Wilson took Kelleher's place in the Detroit game, but he is rather light to play against a line like Lafayette's.

Kelleher's loss may mean a shift in the Eagle backfield. There is a possibility that "Chuck" Darling will move back to Kelleher's place, being replaced at quarter by Donellan.

Lafayette is strongest where Boston College is weakest. The entire Lafayette line is made up of last year's regulars. Among the strongest in the line is Captain "Dutch" Schwab, who plays left tackle.

The rest of the Lafayette line is little inferior to Schwab. O'Connell and Berry, wing men, are big and fast. They will probably play an important part in the game against Boston College, as Lafayette is developing a strong aerial attack.

Entire Lafayette Line Is Made Up of Regulars

Prendergast and Deibel are an excellent brace of tackles who know how to break through and smother plays. On the offensive they are equally good and form perfect interference for the backs.

Brennan, Gazelle, Brunner and Gebhardt form the backfield quartet. They are well matched with the B. C. backs, and have the advantage of being supported by a much heavier line than the Eagles.

A strong backfield is at a disadvantage playing behind a weak line. In this respect, Boston College is unfortunate, as it would be hard to find a better running back than "Chuck" Darling, or a more powerful brace of line smashers than Cronin and Ward. This was clearly proved in the Detroit game, when the Eagle backs could make only two first downs against Detroit, owing to poor support from the line.

FRUZETTI RISKS TITLE TONIGHT

Jimmy Fruzetti, New England light weight champion, will toss his title into the ring when he quarrels with Sailor Byron in a ten-round bout at Worcester tonight. Fruzetti recently fought Kid Lee at Worcester, but his title was not at stake, as Lee weighed above the light weight limit of 135 pounds.

Jimmy Fruzetti

Fruzetti, being champion and a very rugged miller, naturally rules a favorite.

Haggerty Jrs. Win

The Haggerty Juniors defeated the fast Dalton A. C. at the Back Bay Fens. The feature was the tackling of the Donlen brothers, who twice tackled the Dalton's quarterback for a touchdown.

There were ten of the best bicycle riders of the East who left Newark for Chicago over the Lincoln highway to prepare for a six-day bike race in the Windy City on October 29. Those who are in the party, pedalin's their way over the road are Tom Grimm, Worth Mitton, Bobby Walthour, Jr., Charlie Laeger, Fred Spencer, Anthony Beckman, Tom Bello, Lawrence Gaffney, Sam Gastman and Felix Patti.

CALZA GO SOUGHT BY MAT WINNER

Ivan Michailoff, the human spring, will again be seen in action at the Grand Opera as one of the head liners in the big wrestling card being staged by the Howard management, Thursday night.

George Calza

He meets Geo. Kotsonaros, the Greek champion, in a return match, best two falls in three, to a positive finish.

The men met three weeks ago and after wrestling for almost an hour, Kotsonaros threw Michailoff over his head and he sustained such injuries that the doctor refused to allow him to continue the match.

Of course this gave Kotsonaros the bout but Michailoff and many of the fans have since claimed that the Cossack can beat the Greek if given another chance. Michailoff has remained in Boston for the past ten days and has finally succeeded in forcing Kotsonaros into the match. The fact that Michailoff insists on the wrestling share of the gate receipts being split on the winner take all basis is a sure sign that he is confident of winning.

The winner will challenge George Calza, who is now on his way to the United States.

Another big match on the card will be Stanley Staciak, the Polish Hercules, who meets Mike Perini, the Italian giant. Perini stands six feet tall and weigh 225 pounds. Staciak is six feet, three inches tall and weighs an even 250 pounds. He is one of the greatest young wrestlers in the game today. He is only twenty-three years of age and with his size and knowledge of the mat game has a chance with any wrestler in the world.

The curtain-raiser will bring together Joe Perelli and Frank Lurich in a one fall finish contest. Perelli has been dissatisfied ever since Lurich beat him at the Arena on Columbus Day and thinks he has an even chance to reverse the decision on Thursday night.

BOGASH AND REED IN GOTHAM BOUT

New York, Oct. 23.—Jim Buckley, matchmaker of the Pioneer A. C., is the first local promoter to step into the breach in an effort to conduct bouts in the elimination series recommended by the State Athletic Commission for the purpose of developing a middleweight to box Dave Rosenberg for the title.

Pal Reed

Buckley has two of the boxers named by the commission signed for bouts and has offered to book the remaining six for matches at the Pioneer Club during the indoor season. Lou Bogash, Bridgeport middleweight, and Pal Reed, of Boston, are the middleweights who have been signed. They will clash in the stellar twelve-round bout Tuesday night at the East Twenty-fourth street club.

DARTMOUTH LOOKS BAD FOR HARVARD GAME

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

The melancholy days are here—melancholy for the football prognosticator, and for the old grad and undergrad of colleges whose grid arrays have been changed overnight from potential champions to bruised and broken idols.

Both are particularly melancholy this otherwise glad day because of the unlooked for happenings of Saturday, for fully one-third of the football outcomes of that day crossed up the dope.

In this column on Friday the outcomes of twenty-two games involving Eastern elevens were predicted, and while it is true the expected happened in the Yale-Williams, Tufts-Norwich, Mass. Aggies-Amherst, Wesleyan-Hobart, Maine-Bates, Brown-Lehigh, Princeton-Maryland, Cornell-Colgate, Penn. State-Middlebury, Army-New Hampshire, Pennsylvania-Swarthmore, Lafayette-Bucknell, Vanderbilt-Texas, Navy-Georgia Tech, games, several separate and distinct shocks were sustained when Vermont beat Dartmouth; Detroit bested B. C.; New York nosed out Columbia; Pittsburg licked Syracuse; B. U. held Holy Cross to a tie; Washington and Lee did similarly to West Virginia; Bowdoin dittoed to Colby, and Harvard failed to trounce Centre by the predicted margin of points.

Of the last group the two happenings that came without the slightest warning were Vermont's victory over the Green and New York's conquering of Columbia. Few, if any, expected the games would be close. Yet while it is true the favorite barely failed to come through, in each case the victor deserved the honors won.

The elements of luck, overconfidence, etc., played their parts in both the last as well as in other upsets of the day, but at Hanover the Vermont eleven was the superior team, while at New York, N. Y. U. was not the inferior one.

Fumble in Last Few Minutes Beats Eagle

At Detroit a fumble in the last five minutes of play changed the expected B. C. victory to a defeat; at Syracuse an intercepted forward pass late in the game altered very markedly the complexion of things and so it went in many contests of the day. But football is more or less made up of just these little things, and while they may form excellent alibis, the only thing that goes down in history is the ultimate score.

At Cambridge the Crimson started out just as the writer anticipated. Twenty-one points in fifteen minutes of play and the game seemed gooseberries for Harvard. A lead of that size gained in so short a space would wreck the morale of many a grid outfit. But it had anything but that effect on the "Praying Colonels" from Danville. Instead of losing spirit they gained it; instead of crumpling they became more stalwart; instead of accepting defeat they visioned victory, and if you asked the onlookers after the game, the majority would inform you Centre was the better team.

One Must Not Forget Harvard's Accomplishment

But in praising the Kentuckians one must not forget Harvard's accomplishment. Confronted by as brilliant, as varied and as ably handled an offence as Harvard has faced since the Penn State game last year, the Crimson in the final three periods yielded Centre only a single touchdown and goal from the field.

Because of certain recognized human limitations the writer viewed but one game on Saturday, that one being the Dartmouth-Vermont contest at Hanover, N. H., and today he joins, with every Dartmouth man, in viewing with cankerous countenance Dartmouth's chances against Harvard in the big Stadium game of this week.

Dartmouth's eleven, as it played against Vermont, reminded us much of the Yale eleven we saw two Saturdays ago, for the Green, like the Blue, appeared to have the raw material with which to construct an able team, but the team as it performed lacked intelligent leadership, a sound and scoring offense and proper co-ordination. Then, too, it disclosed an alarming weakness in fundamental football.

They Will Achieve Miracle If They Can Prepare Team

And, if Head Coach Jackson Cannell and his assistants and the array of former Dartmouth grid stars who already are at work with the team, can prepare it for a respectable showing against the Crimson on Saturday, they will have achieved a miracle.

Do not, however, judge the power of Vermont by its record previous to Saturday's game.

Tom Keady, the Vermont coach, has an array of material that in size and ability compares favorably with the best in the land. His ponderous and powerful forwards weighed fully as much if not more than the Green vanguard and knew and played more real football. And Keady's backfield is a honey.

Just what will take place at Hanover before the Green squad heads for Harvard on Friday is not known.

Only Three Days to Prepare for the Crimson

Only three days of practice remain in which the team can be prepared for the Crimson—three days in which to teach fundamental football; to select from the many plays taught them a few of the sounder ones and perfect their operation; to build defensive formations suitable to oppose the powerful Crimson attack; to develop a real field general; to inculcate that brand of fighting spirit which has made Dartmouth famous the world over.

Quite an undertaking, eh, what?

TRAMBITAS TAKES ON HARRY SILVA

At the Casino A. C. of Lynn next Thursday night, Alex Trambitas will meet Harry Silva of the West End in the main bout of ten rounds. Trambitas has made a big hit with the fans of Boston, many of whom will be at the ringside when he crawls through the ropes to meet the hard hitting West End Hebrew.

Alex Trambitas

Both boys have posted forfeits of $200 for 154 pounds at 3 o'clock. Trambitas easily beat Steve Latzo at the Arena and then lost a decision to Eddie Shevlin after ten rounds of fastest boxing.

Alex knocked the professor down, which is pretty good when you take into consideration that very few men in the world have been able to do this.

WASHINGTON IN STAR CAMBRIDGE VICTORY

Cambridge Post, A. L., defeated Norwood Post, A. L., 7 to 0, at Russell Field in a wildly exciting game. Spud Washington was the star.

BOWLERS START NOVEMBER 1

The Everett Fraternal Bowling League is preparing to open the season the first of November, according to Secretary-Treasurer Louis McKenna. In past years this league has come to the front in that city, and always has a large following of enthusiastic fans.

Louis McKenna

Besides being one of the leading lights in the Everett League, McKenna has been cutting quite a figure in the Boston Jewelers' League and Veteran Firemen's Association.

The following teams are in the league: Improved Order of Red Men, Loyal Order of Moose, Knights of Columbus, Massachusetts Catholic Foresters, Veteran Firemen and Elks.

PATSY LOGAN LOOKS LIKE BOXING "FIND"

Patsy Logan, the remarkable 104-pound amateur, who won the 112-pound class at the St. Joseph's amateur show, will from now on be looked after by Eddie Mack. Logan has a bad nose and it will be operated on the latter part of this week. Mack intends to keep him in the amateurs for a long while yet. Patsy looks like one of the best amateurs turned out since the days of Jimmy Walsh, being only 15 years old and possessing all the qualifications of a veteran.

FITZ PROVES LODGE CLASSED EUROPEANS WITH CHINESE

QUOTES SENATE SPEECH

Senator Opposed Admitting Jews, Italians, Poles, Greeks and Hungarians

Sandwich, Oct. 23.—"Senator Lodge attacked not only the Jews and Italians; he flayed the Poles, Greeks and Hungarians as well.

"He lumped them all into one undesirable group and said they must never mix with 'the English-speaking races.' The door ought to be closed against them, he said, just as it had been shut against the Chinese and other similar undesirables.

"The immigrants of those five races who could neither read nor write make up the slum population, he said, along with the convicts, criminals and paupers.

"Too many immigrants of those five races were settling down in Boston and other places on the Atlantic seaboard, 'where their presence is most injurious and undesirable.'"

John F. Fitzgerald started his campaign for Governor here today with one of the most brilliant speeches of his long public career.

QUOTES LODGE'S SPEECH.

The foregoing are a few interesting snatches from it. It is a reply to Senator Lodge, who was said by Fitzgerald to have insulted the Jews and Italians in his presence. Lodge called Fitzgerald a liar.

Mr. Fitzgerald said:

"Mr. Lodge spoke for the anti-Immigration bill on March 16, 1896, and the following are the exact words of Mr. Lodge, taken from the Congressional Record of that day:

"'It is found in the first place that the illiteracy test will bear most heavily upon the Italians, Russians, Poles, Hungarians, Greeks and Asiatics, and very lightly or not at all, upon English-speaking immigrants.

CLASSED WITH CHINESE.

"'In other words, the races most affected by the illiteracy test are those whose emigration to this country has begun within the last twenty years and swelled rapidly to enormous proportions, races with which the English-speaking people have never hitherto assimilated, and who are most alien to the great body of people of the United States.

"'When you begin,' he continued, 'to pour in unlimited numbers of people of alien or lower races, of less social efficiency, less moral force, you are running the most frightful risk any people can run. I trust that the unerring instinct of the race will shut the danger out as it closed the door upon the coming of the Chinese.'

BARS FRENCH-CANADIANS.

"Mr. Lodge had previously attempted to put a stop to the influx of the French-Canadian people to the large manufacturing cities of Massachusetts, and he especially insulted them when he slammed the door at Washington in the face of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's effort to attain reciprocal relations between the people of Canada and this country.

"Calvin Coolidge's friends know that Mr. Lodge and some of his closest friends in the delegation at Chicago two years ago did everything within their power to undermine Mr. Coolidge's chance of being nominated for the Presidency.

"Samuel W. McCall's friends know that because the popular war Governor dared to differ with him on questions of foreign policy, Lodge prevented Mr. McCall from going to Versailles. He also prevented Mr. McCall from serving on the Trade Commission.

"Mr. Lodge has had ample opportunity to work out his self-ordained plans to regulate the world. Let us now send to the United States Senate from Massachusetts a modest, plain man who believes there is something remaining to be done in the interest of the people of his native Massachusetts, Colonel William A. Gaston."

TOMORROW'S SCHEDULE.

Mr. Fitzgerald's schedule for tomorrow is as follows:

8 a. m., Osterville, postoffice; 9, Mashpee, near postoffice; 9:30, Falmouth, near Town Hall; 10, Woods Hole, Depot square; 10:30, West Falmouth, near postoffice; 10:45, North Falmouth, near postoffice; 11, Buzzards Bay, railroad station; 11:15, Onset, near postoffice; 11:30, Wareham, near postoffice; noon, South Wareham, iron works; 12:30 p. m., Tremont, iron works; 1:30, Middleboro, near Elks' Home; 2:30, Middleboro, Postoffice square; 3, Bridgewater, Summer street and Central square; 3:20, East Bridgewater square; 3:50, Whitman square; 4:10, Abington, postoffice square; 4:20, North Arbington, at Sheehan's store; 4:40, Rockland, Town square; 5:10, Hanover Four Corners; 6, Kingston, railroad crossing; 7:30, Plymouth, at Princess Theatre; 9, Cohasset, Town Hall; 9:40, Quincy, Electa Hall at Quincy square

"Green" Is a Necessity With Modern Lighting

If you believe in Safety First, read the Boston American Green Edition.

Dr. Edward Maden, chief optometrist with Hall & Edwards on Tremont St., will tell you this.

DR. EDWARD MADEN.

"Most of the patients who come to me suffering with defective vision give a history of exposure to excess light," Dr. Maden said today. "Modern methods of artificial illumination and the modern use of white paper, are largely responsible for this, in my opinion.

"When kerosene lamps and candles were the chief source of artificial illumination, and paper was not so glaringly white, people had less trouble with their eyes. The soft yellow light shed by candles is much better for the eyes than the intense white glare of the modern electric light.

"If the old-fashioned ways don't appeal, my advice is to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the Boston American and read the news printed on a green sheet. Unless more hygienic methods of artificial illumination are produced, we will have to have recourse in the future to the exclusive use of green or cream-tinted paper."

PRIZE BEAUTIES IN TROUBLE

"The prettiest girl we ever arrested."

That was the verdict of Patrolmen Fee and Murphy of Lynn after finding Hazel Glover of Sullivan square, Charlestown, in a lodging house in Summer street, Lynn, today. They had been seeking her for the Boston police, who charge her with violating probation. Hazel is nineteen and won a beauty prize in Malden two years ago. A probation officer took the blue-eyed, blonde beauty to Boston.

Florence M. Clifford, prize winning West End beauty, created an uproar in Roxbury District Court today, when arraigned after being discharged from the Psychopathic Hospital, where she has been under observation.

Three times during the hearing the girl fainted. She was revived and shrieked. She was committed to the House of the Good Shepherd.

Miss Clifford was arrested a week ago, following an attempt to marry Christopher Ross. The wedding was interrupted by her guardian, Mrs. Florence Emmons. Miss Clifford was taken into custody while engaged in a drinking bout with three men in a lot behind the Amory street carbarns.

TOLD HUBBY SHE'D WED ANOTHER

"I am now wearing a $150 diamond ring and I am going to marry the man who gave it to me. You need not think you have ruined my life as I am still getting a lot of joy out of it."

Mrs. James Flynn, formerly of Prospect Hill avenue, Somerville, admitted in Middlesex divorce court at East Cambridge todya that she wrote the above letter to her husband. But she opposed Flynn's suit for divorce. He named Louis Leveroni, Somerville grocer, as the trouble-maker in their home.

Flynn said he received the letter after he and his wife separated six years ago.

Flynn admitted in cross-examination that he tried to get a divorce in New Hampshire, but failed.

Mrs. Flynn accused him of cruelty before they separated and of "shadowing" her and following her from one boarding place to another after the break.

MAN FOUND DEAD IN CHARLESTOWN

An unidentified man, about 55 years old, found lying in the rear of No. 541 Main street, Charlestown, was pronounced dead by Dr. Devine on arrival at the Haymarket Square Relief Station.

The police say there were no marks on the body and no evidence of any struggle. The man was five feet ten inches in height, weighed 170 pounds and had a bald head, reddish moustache and wore a golf cap, gray trousers and a single-breasted black serge coat. In his pocket was a twelve-trip ticket from Boston to Woburn and a twelve-trip bus ticket from Reading to Woburn.

100 SHOE WORKERS QUIT LYNN PLANT

Members of the Allied Shoe Workers of America employed at the factory of the Watson Shoe Company, one of the largest in Lynn, walked out today to the number of about 100. Neither company officials nor union leaders would make any statement as to the cause, but it was understood to be due to some disagreement over price lists, particularly as affecting the edgemakers.

HOLD 2 MEN FOR ATTACK ON GIRL IN SOUTH END

As Miss Leither Curler hastened along Shawmut avenue early today toward her lodgings at No. 301 she became aware that two men were following her and gaining upon her.

Just as the girl, who is twenty-two, turned into the hallway of her home the men turned in the same doorway.

They tried to seize her. The girl fought and screamed. One of the men struck her with his fist.

Patrolman Leonard Banks came a-running. He caught and arrested a man giving his name as Forrest McBride of Bradford street, South End. A little later Banks arrested a man giving the name of John H. Redd of Ruggles street, South End. In City Court these two, both colored, pleaded not guilty to assault on Miss Curler. Their cases were continued a week.

8-HOUR DAY FAVORED IN STEEL INDUSTRY

Washington, Oct. 23.—American steel industries are in position to change from the present 12-hour labor day to one or eight hours without increasing the cost of the labor component in their output, in the opinion of a committee of the Federated American Engineering Societies which has completed a nation-wide inquiry into the "shift stem" of labor.

"Profits need not suffer if the change is made with wisdom," said a report made by the committee. "The majority of managers and executives with whom the matter was discussed believe the good of the industry can be better served by eliminating the 12-hour day."

22 OBJECTIONS TO MATTAPAN GARAGE

Application of Catherine T. Curry and others for permission to establish an eleven-car garage at No. 52 Fottler road, Mattapan, met protest before the street commissioners today from twenty-two objectors who signed a petition against it. The board took it under advisement. Plans of the Colonial Filling Station, Inc., to install a 5,000-gallon gasolene station at No. 205 Centre street, Roxbury, with underground tanks, brought no protest.

Wally Reid Better, May Sit Up in a Week's Time

This report was made by Mrs. Alice Davenport, the star's mother-in-law, who added she was in frequent communication by telephone with Mrs. Reid, who is constantly at her husband's bedside at the sanitarium.

Mrs. Davenport was optimistic to the extent of venturing the prediction that her son-in-law will be able to sit up in a week.

DEATH OF CAFE MAN MYSTERY

m. and found Harvey asleep in the bed they shared.

O'Donnell had the outside half of the bed, Harvey being on the wall side. Harvey declared that he heard no sound during the night. The only theory he had was that Harvey, possibly ill on account of the whiskey, threshed around enough to hit his nose against the wall near that side of the bed, keeled over and died from hemorrhage of the nose.

Medical Examiner Leary ordered Harvey's body to the southern mortuary.

Harvey came to Boston a year ago from Toronto. He was thirty-two. He and O'Donnell had a room on Rutland square up to a week ago, when they moved to the Massachusetts avenue suite. O'Donnell described Harvey as a man who took a drink now and then but attended to work and had little to do with girls.

MILL WORKER IS SLAIN IN ROW OVER KNIFE

Lawrence, Oct. 23.—Mike Khatshadorian, in the sight of hundreds of spectators near the North Station, today slew Oliver Lawrence, a fellow mill worker, with a long knife. Women fainted as his victim fell to the ground.

With the bloody knife in his hand, Mike than ran amuck. He tore down the street, waving the knife, and threatening any person who stood in his way.

The screams of the women and cries of the men attracted the attention of Motorcycle Policeman Thomas McCarlie, who drew his gun and started after Khatshadorian.

He finally caught up to the man, and thrust his revolver against the head of the panting fugitive. The knife dropped from Khatshadorian's hand.

At the police station he said he and the man he had killed were both employes of the Pacific Print Mills. The killing, he said, resulted from a quarrel of five years' standing, over the disputed ownership of a pocket knife.

The victim was sixty-five years old and lived at No. 246 Methuen street.

Marcus Loew, a former newsboy, now a well-known theatrical manager, has invited the 150 Brookline newsboys to be his guest at his new State Theatre to see Freckles Barry in "From Rags to Riches."

MAN IS KILLED BY NEW HAVEN TRAIN

An unidentified man, about twenty-five years of age, was severed in two when run over by a southbound New Haven train today almost directly under the Southampton street bridge. Whether the man threw himself under the wheels, or stepped from behind a freight car into the path of the train is not known.

The engineer stopped a short distance down the tracks and passengers came pouring forth to view the body. The train continued after a ten-minute delay.

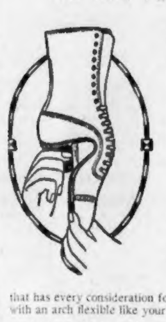
Shoes You Don't Want to Change



All shoes have to look trim on your feet—but there are shoes which hurt you so that you change them upon your first opportunity. Such shoes interfere with one's daily duties and pleasure—many women seem absent-minded, "out of sorts," because they are thinking of the time when they can change into more comfortable shoes.

In the Cantilever Shoe—which is a good looking shoe—heel, toe, sole and arch are carefully fashioned into a shoe, trim, yet comfortable. The Cantilever Shoe is made with the rounded toe and lower heel, with a natural sole-line that has every consideration for the shape of your foot, and with an arch flexible like your own arch.

These make up a shoe good looking but supremely comfortable. Cantilevers help to increase a woman's vigor, endurance and vitality.

Cantilever Shoes are good looking enough to please the eye, and their comfort eases the foot. View a pair on your feet. See how excellently they are made.

Judge Saves Home For Nine Children

LANDLORD CAN'T PUT THEM OUT

Mother Tells Court East Boston Tenements Are Barred to Large Families

Mrs. Little Valentino, who has combed East Boston in vain for a landlord who will rent a tenement to tenants with nine children, was saved from ejectment by Judge Lane of East Boston court today.

The young Valentinos range from two years to seventeen. Mr. Valentino is sick. They think he will have to go to the hospital any day now.

Angelo Tucci, landlord of the present Valentino home at No. 389 Sumner street, has been demanding that they move. Mrs. Valentino has been unable to find another place.

Tucci cited Mrs. Valentino into court today in ejectment proceedings. William McGuire, her lawyer, told Judge Lane the Valentinos were willing to go but no landlord would take them.

"It is impossible for them to get a home," he went on. "No landlord in East Boston will take in nine children. If you don't grant Mrs. Valentino the full six-months' time limit for moving she will be turned out with her family."

Simon Schwartz, counsel for the landlord, said Tucci wanted the premises but would agree to two months' stay. Judge Lane ordered a compromise of three months, but added:

"I want it distinctly understood that, if at the end of three months Mrs. Valentino, having made every reasonable effort, is still unable to find a place, I shall grant her another three months' stay."

TWO NEW FEDERAL JUDGES SWORN IN

Two new judges for this Federal district were sworn in today at the Federal District Court. They are Judge James A. Lowell of Brookline and Judge Elisha H. Brewster of Springfield. Sir Charles Davidson, former chief justice of the Province of Quebec, was the principal invited guest. Judge James M. Morton, Sr., presided.

Marshal Harvey is a native of Charlestown and received his education in the Charlestown grammar and high schools.

WOMAN FALLS 50 FEET TO CONCRETE YARD

Worcester, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Frank A. Heald, thirty years old, fell fifty feet from the rear piazza of the top flat of a six-story tenement block today and landed in a concreted yard. She was but slightly bruised, the lines of a clothes reel at the rear of the first floor tenement breaking her fall.

SCENE OF HUGGER ATTACK

GIRL SAVED BY MOTORIST

GIRL IS LURED TO WOODS BY 'HUGGER'

The mysterious "man on a bicycle" who has excited the unprotected Wellington Grove section of Waltham for the past several weeks by his attacks on women and children, reappeared in broad daylight to attempt an attack on ten-year-old Mary Fines of Lakeview Park.

Mary was walking on Lexington street with her eight-year-old brother John, when a stranger rode up on a bicycle and induced her to accompany him into the woods by the roadside. There he attempted to attack her.

A passing motorist heard her screams. Stopping his car, he ran into the underbrush just in time to save the child. Her assailant saw him coming and ran back to the road, where he mounted his bicycle and fled.

The police searched several hours in the district, but no trace could be found of the man.

Several of the prior attacks have been made by an unidentified man who used a bicycle. The Wellington Grove neighborhood is newly settled and without street lights. The residents have been bothered on many occasions by rowdies and gangsters. The police have refused to give them regular protection.

MALDEN PROTESTS ONE--MAN CARS

Malden is sick and tired of the one-man car.

Its City Council and Chamber of Commerce went to the State Department of Public Utilities today and asked for an order to put the Elevated one-manners off the streets right away.

"We are supposed to have rapid transit from Everett station to Malden square, but don't get it," said Councilman Hoffman.

"These one-man cars are the big, old-fashioned semi-convertibles, originally built for two men to run. They come down Pleasant street in a continuous stream and land in the square. It takes so long to load and unload and tie-ups involving street cars, autos and pedestrians are so frequent that the time will come when fire engines can't get through.

REJECT EPISCOPAL ORDINATION REQUEST

Congregational ministers of Greater Boston, at the Congregational House, No. 14 Beacon street, decided today to reject Episcopal ordination to entitle them to preach in Episcopal pulpits.

TWO INJURED AS AUTO RUNS INTO POLE

Two persons were injured and a number of others shaken up when an automobile owned by Olof W. Benson of No. 3294 Washington street, Roslindale, ran on the sidewalk on Bedford street, near Summer street, Lexington, today and crashed into a pole.

The machine struck Walter Hrones of Winter street, North Lexington, who was on the sidewalk, inflicting injuries resulting in concussion of the brain.

Anna Stromach of No. 101 East Brookline street, Boston, a passenger in the automobile, was cut on the forehead when she was thrown into the windshield.

The car, driven by Christian C. Cloedt of No. 61 Dearborn street, Roxbury, and containing besides Miss Stromach, Katherine Hariss of No. 252 Dudley street, Roxbury, and Benson, was proceeding along Bedford street when it became unmanageable.

Hrones was walking with a Miss Keenan and Irving Dismore, both of Winter street, North Lexington.

The car shot up on the sidewalk, felling Hrones, and then struck a telegraph pole and came to a standstill, with the front end wrecked and the windshield smashed.

Hrones was treated by Dr. James J. Walsh and then removed to the Symmes Arlington Hospital, where he is in a serious condition. Dr. J. Odin Curtin took four stitches in the forehead of Miss Stromach.

BOSTON 'LIQUOR AGENTS' HOLD UP SHERIFF

Houlton, Me., Oct. 23.—Two men giving the names of Joseph Kirk and Eddie Welch, both of Boston, are in Houlton jail awaiting hearing Monday as a result of an attempt to hold up Sheriff Grant of Aroostook county and Deputy Sheriff Graves near the boundary line.

L. A. Shaw of Houlton informed the sheriff that he had been held up near the boundary by two men who claimed to be customs officers, but that he escaped by speeding his car. The sheriff and Deputy Graves went out to investigate and near the old Line House, on the Maine side, they were stopped by two men who said they were customs officers and proposed to search the car for liquor.

The sheriff demanded their authority and one of the men showed what appeared to be a badge, but afterwards was found to be a bit of pasteboard. Meanwhile they were ransacking the sheriff's car.

Sheriff Grant then told the holdup men that they were under arrest and brought them to Houlton. Their car was searched and two quarts of whiskey found. The car bears a Massachusetts registration number.

Sheriff Grant says that he has reason to believe that the men have been doing a prosperous business holding up cars and seizing liquor on the pretence of being customs officers.

PROBE DEATH OF MAN IN SOUTH END ROOM

Police and Medical Examiner Timothy Leary are probing the death of George Harvey, thirty-two, found dead on the floor of his room in suite 66, No. 392 Massachusetts avenue. He had a slight bruise on his nose. An autopsy was performed.

WOMAN FIGHTS TO END LIFE

Richly Clad, She Attempts to Throw Self in Muddy River in the Fens

A woman garbed in silks and sealskin fought furiously for death today on the banks of Muddy River in Back Bay Fens.

Two men, attracted by sobbing, saw her running toward the stream and pursued.

Caught as about to leap, she turned and struggled with the fury of a tigress, meanwhile pleading piteously, "Let me go. It's not your business."

Mystery surrounds her identity for she refused to give the police any information other than the name Anna Irwin.

Love of liquor that she could not control was the reason she ascribed for her attempted suicide and for other such attempts she said she had made in the past.

Sitting in the guardroom at Station 16, Back Bay, her sealskin coat draped loosely about her and a cluster diamond ring sparkling on her left hand she outwitted police questions, refusing to fall into traps set to learn whom she is and to notify relatives.

Her manner and speech, her expensive clothes, also her jewelry indicated she is a woman of refinement, education and wealth. She bore traces of great beauty, spoiled by dissipation or sorrow or both.

"My only failing is liquor," she finally said. "I have been to Psychopathic Hospital before. I have been arrested many times for intoxication. I am tired of it all. It is nobody's business but my own. No one forced liquor on me. I have taken it from the beginning of my own free will."

Later she admitted having a father "highly respected in Andover" and a brother "quite well known and greatly respected."

The fight for death occurred near the junction of Peterborough street and Audubon road.

The men who saved her from herself are George J. Betrianis of No. 126 Jersey street and Thomas D. Word of No. 26 Leon street, Roxbury. They stopped a passing automobile, driven by Paul J. Cleary of No. 93 Highland road, and with him drove the woman to the police station.

'SOFT COAL IS TOO HIGH'---PHELAN

"The price of soft coal in Massachusetts is altogether too high. Lower prices have been established at the mines, but there is no evidence that the retailers of Massachusetts have dropped their prices accordingly," said James J. Phelan, head of the Fuel Administration, today.

Mr. Phelan has authority to fix prices. While indicating he is not ready to employ that power, he said rates and causes of late deliveries are being investigated.

Mr. Phelan said he had written Conrad E. Spens of the National Fuel Administration and E. W. Parker, director of anthracite distribution in Pennsylvania, asking why reported congestion of coal cars had not been corrected.

STABBED 24 TIMES FOR REFUSING SMOKE

Springfield, Oct. 23.—Angered by refusal of a cigarette, two men stabbed Flavio Petricca, thirty-six, of Union street, twenty-four times, cutting him about the face, neck, legs and back. His condition is serious. The attack occurred near South End bridge.

WALTHAM BEGGAR HAS AUTO

Hammill's Arrest in New York Uncovers Luxurious Home and Sedan

The dilapidated barn attached to the house at No. 1 Bemis avenue, Waltham, is dingy and unpainted without. Inside on the upper floor is the luxurious four-room suite of Frederick Hammill, seller of pencils, arrested in New York City for begging on Fifth avenue.

This was discovered by a Boston American reporter who visited the Waltham retreat of Hammill after he had given that address as his home to a New York American reporter in New York City Tombs.

HIS EXPENSIVE SEDAN.

In the lower part of the barn is a garage for Hammill's expensive sedan automobile.

Later in his cell Hammill said to the New York American reporter: "They call me a beggar. They say I am a "panhandler." They say I am rich because I have an automobile. I have. But because I have no legs, may I not have anything else?

"I will be rich some day, though. In that sedan of mine is a perfect gear shift and other apparatus necessary to safe operation of an automobile by a person minus one leg or both. I am going to patent that contrivance and then—no more selling pencils.

WORKED ONCE.

"They say that I have five bank books and a $20,000 ranch in North Dakota. What they mean is, I did have all that. I saved a few thousand dollars and invested it all in oil. The market went up and I had $10,000. I put that into a farm in North Dakota and the value increased to $20,000.

"Then things began going against me, but I managed to save a few hundred dollars out of the wreck.

"Because I have a car like that, everybody becomes indignant at my 'large' earnings. I wish they were large. Then I could retire. You ask how much I make on an average? It is not $20 or $10 a day. It always stays below that.

AUTO VICTIM MAY DIE OF INJURIES

Joseph Spofford.

Joseph Spofford of No. 4 Derne street, West End, who was injured in an automobile accident at Bridge and Commercial streets, Cambridge, is still in a critical condition at the Cambridge City Hospital. Spofford was riding in an automobile operated by Angus E. McGilvray of No. 19 Market street, Cambridge.

3 FINED, 1 APPEALS, IN LIQUOR CASES

For selling moonshine liquor in his Needham barber shop, Natale Furmano of No. 1158 Harrison avenue, Boston, was fined $50 in Dedham district court this morning.

Mrs. Johanna Prescott of No. 6 Riverside street, Needham, paid a fine of $100 for keeping, exposing and selling liquor.

Judge Sanborn fined Ernest Tiede of No. 106 Birch street, East Dedham, $50 and gave him a month in the House of Correction on two complaints for unlawful sale of liquor. Tiede appealed and was held in $300 bail.

Cast Aside as Object of Charity

ROBERT BEEDE.

Youth who is now spurned by the two women who first claimed him after "kidnaping" expose. He has been left in the hands of State charitable authorities.

SPURNED YOUTH IS PAWN OF FATE

Taunton, Oct. 23.—A few days ago two women fought for possession of eight year-old Robert Beede and his parentage was an issue of country-wide interest.

Today Robert Beede was abandoned by both women, left to the care of the State.

His mother, Mrs. Mabel Choquette, spurned the child of an illicit romance and waived possession of the boy in court.

Mrs. Andrew T. Smith declared positively that he was not her Russell, a child of the same age and appearance who disappeared from his home some time ago.

And Mascal Choquette, gypsy, accused of kidnaping when Mrs. Smith claimed the boy as hers, was acquitted of the charge by Judge Austin.

Then to the fore came John F. Hallahan, agent of the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the only person, seemingly, who cared whether the youngster lives or dies.

In ringing tones he demanded a warrant for the arrest of the gypsy on charges of neglect of the child. The case will be argued in juvenile session tomorrow.

BRIGHTON GIRL, MISSING TWO DAYS, RETURNS

Miss Helena Owen, twenty-six, of No. 5 South Waverly street, Brighton, is home after being missing since Saturday night.

The girl returned today from Worcester and Rutland where she had gone to visit a cousin, P. J. O'Keefe, Worcester mail carrier, and her sister, now at the sanitarium.

Worry over the continued ill-health of her parents and her sister so upset her that she gave in to a sudden impulse Saturday to travel and went on the first train available.

She said today: "I was upset because of worrying over father and mother.

"I left my fiance, Daniel Travers of Lynn, in that city and on my way home I became terribly nervous and felt that I just must travel some place so I went right on to Worcester to see my cousin. Then I went to Rutland to see my sister in the sanitarium. That is all."

MISSING GIRL IN ROXBURY COURT

Bridget B. Kearns, eighteen years old, of No. 92 Shirley street, Roxbury, who disappeared last week, has been found. She was located in a hotel where she was stopping with a girl chum.

Today she was in the Roxbury court, charged with being a stubborn child. This charge was brought by her mother when she disappeared. The girl was placed on probation.

The police say the girl's mother objected to her friendship for another young girl and locked Bridget's clothes in a trunk. When the mother returned, the police say, she found Bridget had secured her clothes from the trunk and had fled.

KLAN THREAT TO VETS' MOTHER

Mrs. Anna Glick, 54 years old, of No. 3 Normandy street, Roxbury, mother of three sons who served in the World War, one of whom was killed in action and another crippled for life, has received a letter of warning from the Ku Klux Klan. The letter said:

"You Jews are not wanted here."

Inclosed were bits of feathers hinting at the Kluxian method of pulling people out of bed in the dead of night, bathing them in hot tar and smearing them with feathers.

Mrs. Glick is hysterical with fear. "I have been twenty-nine years in this country. All my boys were in the war, one was killed," here she faltered and her eyes were filled with tears. "What do they want from me? What do they call a good American?"

The letter will be placed in the hands of a detective agency.

CHARLESTOWN MAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Clarence Virtue.

Clarence H. Virtue, twenty-nine years of age, a freight brakeman, employed by the Boston & Maine Railroad, was struck and almost instantly killed by a freight locomotive, while shifting freight cars in Yard No. 14 of the Boston & Maine Railroad, East Somerville.

Virtue, according to the railroad officials, stepped from behind the freight train into the path of locomotive No. 433.

Virtue was married and resided at No. 86 Medford street, Charlestown.

FINED FOR ATTACK ON DEDHAM 'PHONE GIRL

Peter Melilli of No. 2 Manila street, Readville, was fined $50 by Judge Sanborn in Dedham District Court today for assault on Miss Mary D. Brennan, a telephone operator at the Dedham exchange. Miss Brennan, who lives on East street, Dedham, said she was on her way home from work last night when Melilli stopped her on High street and struck her. She denied knowing him. Melilli appealed and was held in $300 bail. A charge of drunkenness was placed on file.

BAR 2 CORPORATIONS FROM STOCK SALES

The Guaranteed Service Corporation of Delaware, with an authorized capital stock of $3,000,000, and Kay Silvers, Inc., a Maine corporation with authorized capital of $1,500,000, were today barred from selling any more stock in this State. They had failed to file vital information and the department ruled that sale of the stock "is fraudulent or would result in fraud."

$4,000 FIRE LOSS IN CARRIAGE HOUSE

A fire believed to have been of incendiary origin today destroyed the carriage house of Joseph V. Bornay of Pleasant street, East Lexington, the loss being estimated at $4,000. The blaze attained tremendous headway before the firemen arrived, and lighted up the country for miles around. The building was used for the storage of carriages and sleighs.

MEDFORD BOY LEAPS TO DEATH FOLLOWING LOVE QUARREL

BOSTON'S FAIREST DANCERS BRAVE CHILLY October Morn! No steam-heated studio for these hardy pupils of Amelia Burnham, who stepped right out to the shores of Fresh Pond and then stepped some more. The time was disgracefully early and the frost-covered grass seemed to give them a lot o' pep. Here they are in one of their intricate dances.

FUNDS POUR IN FOR SALLIES' HOME SERVICE Appeal in Greater Boston! Salvation Army officials anticipate heavy demands on their resources during this Winter and have extended a call for even small contributions. Photo shows a nurse giving a baby a bath at the Sallies' Evangeline Booth Home and Maternity Hospital, No. 202 West Newton street, funds for whose maintenance will be provided from the drive contributions.

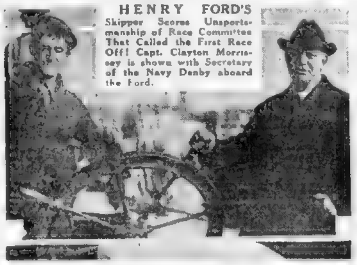
MAKING THE FUR FLY! Fur of any kind attached to the garment itself is having a vogue in Greater Boston these cool days. An example of the mode is shown in this heavy dress of brown duvetyn, trimmed with taupe fox collar and cuffs. Fur also dangles from the end of the cuffs. (Inter- [illegible] al News Reel.)

FAIR GROWER WITH HER SWEET "PETOOTIE"! Luther Burbank can grow oranges on lemon trees and make a cowslip give milk, so 'tis said, but it remained for Miss Evelyn Raftery of Boston to grow a sweet potato canary. She denies that the thing was started from bird seed. Here it is.



HENRY FORD'S Skipper Scores Unsportsmanship of Race Committee That Called the First Race Off! Capt. Clayton Morrissey is shown with Secretary of the Navy Denby aboard the Ford.

Don't show this to the police."

REMARKABLE PHOTOGRAPH OF THE MOST TALKED ABOUT FOOTBALL PLAY EVER WITNESSED AT THE HARVARD STAdium! It shows the Centre College eleven doing their "penitentiary shift," the play that so befuddled Harvard and so enthused the big audience of 50,000 that it stood up and roared every time the play was put over successfully. Note the confusion of the Harvard men, who apparently don't know just what "all the shootin's for." The Centre boys' freak play consists in the forwards walking back and forth laterally and letting one of the ends serve as centre and snap the ball back. Ernie Quigley, National league umpire, says the play is O. K. Coach Charley Moran says the last time it was used was in 1891. (Photo by Gus Williams, staff cameraman.)

ROBERT THAYER SUFFERS BROKEN COLLARBONE WHEN HIS MOUNT Throws Him! The annual meet of the Myopia Hunt Club drew some of the finest riders of the season and provided the large gallery with plenty of thrills, particularly when Robert Thayer, riding Slipshod, slipped just before the animal was about to leap the sheep hurdle. WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

See This Romance of Princess Mary Tudor Starring Marion Davies in Super Motion Pictures Which Are to Appear at the Park Theatre, October 26

The king tells Lady Mary (Marion Davies) she must have done with Brandon

World-Famous Story of the All-Conquering Power of Love Over the Heart of the Wilful and Beautiful Sister of the Autocratic King Henry VIII.

This famous story has been created into a superlative photoplay by Cosmopolitan Productions, direction of Robert G. Vignola. It is released as a Paramount picture.

By Charles Major

AFTER this, for a few days, Mary was quiet enough. Her irritable mood had vanished, but Jane could see that she was on the lookout for some one all the time, although she made the most [illegible] her watchfulness.

At last a meeting came about in this way. Next to the King's bed-chamber was a luxuriously furnished little apartment with a well selected library. Here Brandon and I often went, afternoons, to read, as we were sure to be undisturbed.

Late one day Brandon had gone, having selected a volume, took his place in a secluded little alcove half hidden in arras draperies. There was a cushioned seat along the wall and a small diamond shaped window to furnish light.

He had not been there long when in came Mary. I cannot say whether she knew Brandon was there or not, but she was there and he was there, which is the only thing to the point, and finding him she stepped into the alcove before he was aware of her presence.

Brandon was on his feet in an instant, and with a low bow was backing himself out most deferentially to leave her in sole possession if she wished to rest.

"Master Brandon, you need not go. I will not [illegible] sides, if this place is not large enough for us both, I will go. I would not disturb you." She spoke with a tremulous voice and a quick, uneasy glance and started to move backward out of the alcove.

"Lady Mary, [illegible] can you speak so? You know—you must know—oh! I beg you." But she interrupted him by taking his arm and drawing him to a seat beside her on the cushion. She could have drawn down the Colossus of Rhodes with the look she gave Brandon, so full was it of command, entreaty and promise.

"That's it, I don't know, but I want to know and I want you to sit here beside me and tell me. I [illegible] to be reconciled with you, [illegible] the way you treated me when last we met. I am going to [illegible] friends with you whether you will or not. Now what do you say to that, sir?" She spoke with a fluttering little laugh of uneasy nonassurance which showed that her heart was not nearly so confident nor so bold as her words would make believe. Poor Brandon, usually so ready, had nothing to say to that, but sat in helpless silence.

Was this the sum total of all his wise determinations made at the cost of so much pain and effort? Was this the answer to all his prayers, "Lead me not into temptation"? He had done his part, for he had done all he could. Heaven had not helped him, since here was temptation thrust upon him when least expected, and when the way was so narrow he could not escape, but must meet it face to face.

Mary soon recovered her self possession—women are better skilled in this art than men—and continued:

"I am not intending to say one word about your treatment of me [illegible] day over in the forest, although it was very bad and you have acted abominably ever since. Now is not that kind in me?" And she softly laughed and peeped up at the poor fellow from beneath those sweeping lashes, with the premeditated purpose of [illegible] him, I suppose. She was beginning to know her power over him, and it was never greater than at this moment. Her beauty had its sweetest quality, for the princess was sunk and the woman was dominant with flushed face and flashing eyes that caught a double lustre from the glowing love that made her heart beat so fast. Her gown, too, was the best she could have worn to show her charms. She must have known Brandon was there and must have dressed especially to go to him. She wore her favorite long flowing outer sleeve without the close fitting under one. It was slit to the shoulder, and gave entrancing glimpses of her arms with every movement, leaving them almost bare when she lifted her hands, which was often, for she was as full of gestures as a Frenchwoman. Her [illegible] was cut low both back and front, showing her large perfectly molded throat and neck like an alabaster pillar of beauty and [illegible] and disclosing her bosom just to its shadowy incurving, white and billowy as drifted snow. Her hair was thrown back in an attempt at a coil, though, like her own rebellious nature, it would not brook restraint, and persistently escaped in a hundred little curls that fringed her face and [illegible] the soft white nape of her neck [illegible] fluffy sunlit gold [illegible] new cut ivory.

[illegible] He felt [illegible] beside her [illegible] the intervals between her speech the [illegible] wildest thoughts ran through his brain. He wondered how he could escape [illegible] of the window [illegible] that possibly he might break away through it [illegible] then he [illegible]

[illegible] After a [illegible] Mary [illegible] I [illegible] more of [illegible] answer, dear lady [illegible]

I beg you—oh, do you not see—"

"Yes, yes, but answer my question, am I not kind—more than you deserve?"

"Indeed, yes! a thousand times. You have always been so kind, so gracious and so condescending to me that I can only thank you, thank you, thank you," answered Brandon, almost shyly, not daring to lift his eyes to hers.

Mary saw the manner quickly enough—what woman ever missed it, much less so keen-eyed a girl as she—and it gave her confidence and brought back the [illegible] of her own [illegible]

"How modest we have become! Where is the boldness of which we used to have so [illegible] Have I always been so? How about the first time I met you? Was I kind then? And as to condescension, don't, don't use that word between us."

"No," returned Brandon, [illegible] in turn was [illegible] "I can't say that you were very kind [illegible] praise [illegible] It was so [illegible] it almost took me off my feet." And they both laughed in remembering the scene of their first meeting. "No, I can't say your kindness [illegible] strong, in [illegible] first interview, but it was there [illegible] and when Lady Jane [illegible] your real nature asserted itself as it always does, and you were kind to me, kind as only you can be."

That was getting very near to the sentimental dangerous [illegible] he thought, and he said to himself: "If this does not end quickly I shall have to escape."

"You are easily satisfied if you call that good," laughingly returned Mary. "I can [illegible] so much better than that if I try."

"Let me see you try," said Brandon.

"Why, I'm trying now," answered Mary, with a distracting little pout. "Don't you know genuine [illegible] goodness when you see it? I'm doing my very best now. Can't you tell?"

"Yes, I think I recognize it, but [illegible] bad again."

"No, I won't! I will not be [illegible] even to please you. I have determined not to be and I will not—not even to be good. This," placing her hand over her heart, "is just full of 'good' today," and her lips parted as she laughed at her own [illegible]

"I am afraid you had better be bad. I give you fair warning," said Brandon [illegible] He felt [illegible] and [illegible] from [illegible] After a [illegible] Mary continued, regardless of the warning:

"But [illegible] is reversed with us. At first I was unkind to you, and you were kind to me, but now I am kind to you and you are [illegible] to me."

DAILY SHORT STORY—SIGNS OF TIMES

By Bee Donalds

THEY WERE STILL HONEYMOONING IN THE PRETTY BUNGALOW

PAUL PRENTISS and his wife Dorothy had been back from their wedding trip more than two months, but they were still honeymooning in the pretty bungalow Paul had [illegible] to his wife as a wedding gift. Everything [illegible] piece of [illegible] chosen with their joint taste [illegible] have [illegible] the hearts of any bride [illegible] that ever trod the way to the altar.

It was rather a [illegible] with a [illegible] for Paul [illegible] where pictures of all the latest [illegible] was boasted.

In Dot's sitting room there was a curling little [illegible] with perfumed [illegible] cigarettes where Paul was wont to join his wife for a quiet little smoke now and then.

They both related their interest in vaudeville [illegible] and screen pictures, also the weekly [illegible] dances, and neither of them would think of [illegible] the annual visit of the Follies any more than they would think of going without their breakfast.

Paul's [illegible] by a generous [illegible] for records as [illegible] preferred. As a result all the latest fox trots and saxophone [illegible] more [illegible] of [illegible] still enjoyed every minute of the pastime.

Into this Garden of Eden the innocent postman one day deposited a serpent in the form of a letter from Grandmother Prentiss. When Paul came whistling up the front walk that night at dinner time a [illegible] visaged, tearful wife met him at the door.

"Why, Dot [illegible]" he exclaimed. "What has happened?"

"Nothing [illegible]—oh, Paul, I don't mean any disrespect to your grandmother, [illegible] why couldn't she have waited just a little longer?"

She held out a letter addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Prentiss, which he snatched from her hand, and after [illegible] the contents, [illegible] reading [illegible]

"[illegible] We [illegible] way [illegible]"

"But Paul," Dot interrupted breathlessly at his side, "[illegible] we can't—she's on the way!"

Paul [illegible] and threw up both hands in a gesture of utter despair. "[illegible] our good times backed right off the beam," [illegible] "Hasn't seen [illegible] good woman since I was dressed [illegible] grandmother's generation [illegible] pokey lot, I'll say."

"I suppose we'll have to get ready for our dear," suggested Dot. "The letter says she'll be here Thursday and that's tomorrow."

"Suffering cats! So soon?" he growled. "We'll have to bow to the [illegible] I suppose [illegible] can't afford to offend the old [illegible]"

That night Paul cleared the walls of his den and [illegible] his stage favorites to the safety of a packing box in the attic. [illegible] Dot's [illegible] they carefully removed all [illegible] of the [illegible] cigarettes and [illegible] attention to the [illegible] records.

[illegible] would go [illegible] if she ever saw [illegible] around here to the [illegible] of the latest one, 'The Everglade Glide,'" Paul [illegible] as he added a record to the growing stack which they were [illegible] to keep company with the pictures in the attic. [illegible] If we keep on there won't [illegible] left to tune up for [illegible] "[illegible] you say [illegible] this simple little fox trot and see what happens?"

Grandmother Prentiss' train was due to arrive at five-thirty and Paul had arranged to leave the [illegible] to meet her. He was [illegible] she would take a [illegible] in finding her. He felt so sure she would be slow about getting out of the train that he dashed a few moments on his way to the sheds to finish his cigarette, and by the time he got downstairs the [illegible] passenger was coming up.

There was no sign of a gray shawl or a wistaria hat—not a woman of [illegible] in the sheds and for a moment [illegible] hoped wickedly that grandmother had suffered a change of heart about coming [illegible] great [illegible] several times before he gave up the chase, then boarded [illegible] for home.

If he had missed her, he figured she would beyond doubt go [illegible] the conservative surface car, by which calculation he would reach home a way before [illegible] and try to keep her from [illegible] When he [illegible] from the door, a regal [illegible] gray [illegible] of the very latest [illegible] was [illegible] at the floor to the strains of the only fox trot record they had left in the [illegible]

"[illegible] there you are," she exclaimed, waving [illegible] into the [illegible] with her. "Nice way to treat your old grandmother. I looked all around when I reached the [illegible] stand [illegible] I'm not one for wasting time, so I came on out. Say, Paul, are these all the records you've bought? They're certainly a poky lot. There's a new one out—'The Everglade Glide'—you must buy it and a lot of saxophone things that are the grasshopper's ankle for dancing. We'll stock up tomorrow."

When the evening meal was concluded, during which Mrs. Prentiss Senior kept up a running fire of comment on the big theatrical ventures, the latest styles and so on, she said peevishly: "I've looked all over for a fag—I finished my last package in the train."

The next day she insisted on stocking the [illegible] cabinet with records, almost every one of which was a duplicate of those reposing peacefully in the attic. She bought Dot a carton of cigarettes and insisted she must learn to smoke them.

One afternoon she sailed into Dot's room and declared, "Here, child, your face is altogether too pale to have character. Use some of this rouge of mine—best on the market—get into your prettiest frock and we'll take in that tea dansant I heard about yesterday."

Grandmother Prentiss's exit was as swift as her entree. One Sunday morning, after her stay had lengthened into the third week and the younger generation was a bit fatigued by the rapidity of her gait, they arose at a late hour to find her room empty and the following note on her dresser.

"Dear Kiddies—Didn't want to disturb your beauty sleep—you seemed to need it. Have had a glorious visit and hope you'll invite me again. Am hurrying home for the annual Pageant Ball. Enclose find check for five hundred dollars. Use it for luxuries and a bit of life's spice now and then. Strikes me you're inclined to be a little slow, and I don't like to see youngsters grow old before their day—Grandmother."

"Oh, please, Babsie," she begged. "I'll meet you anywhere and eat at a counter if I have to. Just so I see you. I meant I couldn't come yesterday when you and Neal lunched together. And, anyway, I feel that you two ought to have at least one cosy little visit a week without any third person—even—me."

Face Peeling Habit Becoming Fashionable

Wonders of Mercolized Wax

Women of fashion and refinement in this country as in Europe seem to have been acquiring the Mercolized Wax habit, depending less and less upon cosmetics for their complexion difficulties. It does seem a lot saner to just peel off the worn-out skin when it loses its youthful color and appearance—now that this can be done so easily, safely, painlessly and economically. There's no trouble getting Mercolized Wax at any drug store, since its virtues have become generally known here, and there's no trouble using it. Just as you use cold cream, you use it at night, washing it off mornings. The wax, put up by [illegible] Co., Chicago [illegible] takes off the old scarf skin [illegible] a little each day. The new [illegible] which gradually appears [illegible] and beautifully white, radiant with girlish loveliness. Any surface trouble like blackheads, pimples, red or yellow patches, freckles, etc., vanishes, of course, with the discarded cuticle.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine has a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are made of pine and syrup. The "syrup" is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. This makes a full pint—more than you can buy ready made for three times the money. It is pure, and tastes good.

You can feel it take right hold of a cough or cold. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it, usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

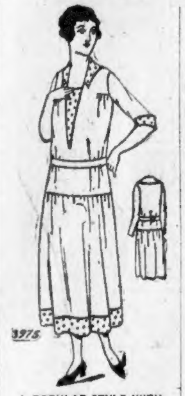
A PRACTICAL HOUSE DRESS

4006. She who chooses this model for her work dress will find every work day brighter because of the comfort and convenience which this style reflects. Dotted percale and white linene are here combined.

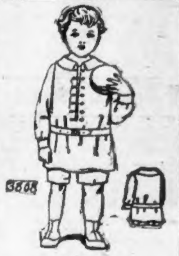
The pattern is cut in seven sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size will require 6½ yards of 36-inch material. The width at the foot is about two yards.



A POPULAR STYLE WITH NEW FEATURES

3975. This jaunty model will be very pleasing in crepe satin, in Poiret twill, or serge, and also in pongee, gingham and cotton prints. The waist has long lines, and becoming fulness. The skirt is comfortably wide and in approved length.

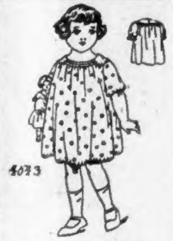
This pattern is cut in seven sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 4½ yards of 40-inch material. The width at the foot is 2⅛ yards. Plain and contrasting material combined is excellent for this model.



A "TRIM" SUIT

3808. Very important in the life of a little boy is a comfortable suit—whether it be for school or play. The style shown here is good for cheviot, flannel, serge, homespun, velvet and corduroy. Wash goods are also attractive.

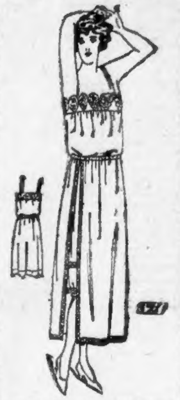
The pattern is cut in four sizes: 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. A 4-year size will require three yards of 27-inch material.



A DAINTY FROCK FOR A "LITTLE TOT"

4043. With sleeves flowing or puffed, and the fulness at the neck shirred or smocked, this dress will be very pleasing. Nainsook, voile, challie or gingham may be selected for the making.

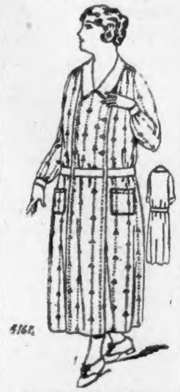
The pattern is cut in five sizes: 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. A 3-year size will require 2¾ yards of 36-inch material.



A NEW STYLE OF "LINGERIE"

3911. Fashion is ever busy evolving new ideas for pretty undergarments. This style speaks for comfort and simplicity, and provides a very convenient combination garment that may serve as a slip. Taffeta with embroidery or pongee finished with hemstitching would be the "newest" development for this model. It is good, too, for batiste or crepe.

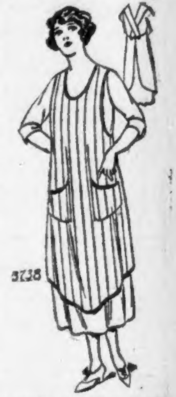
The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size requires three yards of 36-inch material.



A GOOD SERVICE DRESS FOR SLENDER OR STOUT FIGURES

4162. Comfortable fulness and slenderizing lines mark this desirable model. The back extends over the fronts to form yoke sections to which the fronts are gathered. This is a good style for percale, gingham, garbardine and flannelette. The sleeve may be in wrist length or short, as illustrated.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 6⅛ yards of 32-inch material. The width at the foot is 2⅜ yards.



A SIMPLE PRACTICAL APRON MODEL

Pattern 3738 is shown in this illustration. It is cut in four sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size will require 2⅞ yards of 36-inch material.

Percale, calico, gingham, sateen, chambray, drill, cambric and muslin are good for this style.

MAN AND MAID

What Has Gone Before

Sir Nicholas Thormonde, a wealthy Englishman, wounded and blinded in one eye in action, starts writing his diary in Paris while the war is still on. He is sick of life. The war has robbed it of all that a young man can find of joy. He tries to amuse himself in the company of several women friends, who, he feels, seek his company for his money and not for the love he craves. He starts to write a book and hires a typist, Miss Sharp. He falls in love with her and serves notice on the "Fluffies." She refuses to give him her address. Nicholas asks her to marry him as a business proposition. She consents. Nicholas arranges to help her family out of debt at great expense.

THEN our talk drifted to politics and the war, and it was just about midnight before old George left, and when he had gone I opened the window wide and looked out on the night; there was a half moon almost set, and the air was still, and very warm for the beginning of November. There are nights like that, mysterious and electric, when all sorts of strange forces seem to be abroad. And something of romance in me exalted my spirit, and I found myself saying a prayer that I might be true to my trust, and have strength enough of will to wait patiently until my Alathea comes voluntarily into my arms.

And how I wonder what she is thinking about, there at Auteuil.

I went along into the room which is to be hers tomorrow, and I saw that it was all arranged except the flowers, which would come in fresh in the morning. And then I hobbled back to my own room and rang for Burton. The faithful creature waits for me, no matter how late I am.

When I was safely in bed he came over to me and his dear old face showed emotion.

"I do indeed wish you happiness, Sir Nicholas; tomorrow will be the best day of my life."

We shook hands silently, and he left me, still writing in this journal!

I feel no excitement, rather as if another act in the drama of life was ended, that is all, and that tomorrow I am starting upon a new one which will decide whether the end of the play shall be tragedy or content!

I am not going to describe the wedding in this journal. A civil ceremony is not interesting in its baldness. I had literally no emotions, and Alathea looked as pale as her white frock. She wore a little sable toque and a big sable cloak I had sent her the night before, by Nelson. The ring was the new diamond hoop set in platinum. No more gold fetters for modern girls!

Old George and Mr. Nelson were our witnesses, and the whole thing was over in a few minutes and we were being congratulated. Burton was by far the happiest face there, as he helped me into the automobile, lent by the embassy. Alathea had just shaken hands with Mr. Nelson and been wished joy by George. I wonder what he thought of the glasses, which even for the wedding she had not taken off!

"May you know every happiness, Lady Thormonde," he said. "Take care of Nicholas and make him quite well, he is the best fellow on earth."

Alathea thanked him coldly. He is such a citizen of the world that he showed no surprise, and finally we were off on our way to the flat.

Here Madame Bizot and her daughter, and the baby, awaited us! And in the creature's tiny hand was a bunch of violets. This was the first time Alathea smiled. She bent and kissed the wee face. These people know and love her. I stayed behind a few moments to express my substantial appreciation of their friendly interest. Burton had been beside the chauffeur to help me in and out, and while we had been driving Alathea had not spoken a word. She had turned from me, and her little body was drawn back as far in the corner as possible.

My own emotions were queer. I did not feel actually excited. I felt just as I used when we were going to take up a new position on the line where great watchfulness would be necessary to succeed.

The maid Alathea had engaged arrived in the morning, and I had had the loveliest flowers put in all the rooms. Pierre intended to outdo himself for the wedding dejeuner, I knew, and Burton had been able to find somewhere a really respectable looking footman, not too obviously wounded.

Alathea handed me my crutch as we got out of the lift. Perhaps she thinks this is going to be one of her new duties!

We went straight into the sitting-room and I sat down into my chair. Her maid, named Henriette, had taken her cloak and hat in the hall, and I suppose from sheer nervousness, and to cover the first awkward moments, Alathea buried her face in the big bowl of roses on a table near another arm chair, before she sat down in it.

"What lovely flowers!" she said. They were the first words she had spoken to me directly.

"I wondered what would be your favorites."

"You must tell me for the future. I just had roses because they happen to be mine."

"I like roses best, too."

I was silent for quite two minutes. She tried to keep still; then I spoke, and I could hear a tone of authority in my voice.

"Alathea, again I ask you please to remove your glasses. As I told you before, I know that you wear them only so that I may not see your eyes, not for sight or light or anything. To keep them on is a little undignified and ridiculous now, and irritates me very much."

She colored and straightened herself.

"To remove my glasses was not part of the bargain. You should have made it a condition if you had wanted to impose it. I do not admit that you have the least right to ask me to take them off, and I prefer to wear them."

"For what possible reason?"

"I will not tell you."

I felt my temper rising. If I had not been a cripple I could not have resisted the temptation to rise and seize her in my arms, tear the d—n things off, and punish her with a thousand kisses. As it was, I felt an inward rage. What a fool I had been not to have actually made the removal of them a sine qua non before I signed the contract!

"It is very ungenerous of you, and shows a spirit of hostility which I think we agreed that you would drop."

Silence.

The desire to punish her physically, beat her, make her obey me, was the only thing I felt. A nice emotion for a wedding day!

"Do you mean to wear them all the time, even when we go out in the world?" I asked when I could control my voice.

"Probably."

"Very well, then; I consider you are breaking the bargain in spirit, if not in the letter. You yourself said you were going to be my permanent secretary. No secretary in the world would insist upon doing something she knew to be a great irritation to her employer."

Silence.

"You are only lowering yourself in my estimation by showing this obstinacy. Since we have [illegible] to live together, I would rather not have to grow to despise you for childishness."

She started to her feet, and with violence threw the glasses on to the table. Her beautiful eyes flashed at me; the lashes are that peculiar curly kind, not black, but soft and dusky, a little lighter near the skin. It is the first time I have ever seen such eyelashes on a woman's lids. One sees them quite often on little boys, especially little vagabonds in the street. The eyes themselves are intensely blue, and with everything of passion and magnetism, and attraction, in them. It is no wonder she wore glasses while having to face the world by herself! A woman with eyes like that would not be safe alone in any avocation where men could observe her.

I have never seen such expressive, fascinating eyes in my life. I thrilled in every fibre of my being, and with triumph also to think that our first battle should be won!

"Thank you," I said, making my voice very calm. "I had grown so to respect your balance and serenity I should have been sorry to have to change my opinion."

I could see that she was palpitating with fury at having been made to obey. I felt it wise to turn the conversation.

"I suppose lunch will be ready [illegible]."

She went towards the door then, and left me. I wondered what she would say when she got to her room and found the three sapphire bangles waiting for her on the dressing table!

I had written on a card inside the lid of the box:

"To Alathea with her husband's best wishes."

Burton announced lunch before she returned to the sitting-room. I sent him to say that it was ready, and a moment after she came in. She had the case in her hand which she put down on the table, and her cheeks were very pink, her eyes she kept lowered.

"I wish you would not give me presents," she gasped a little breathlessly, coming close up to my chair. "I do not care to receive them, you have loaded me with rings, the clothes, everything, and now these."

I took the case and opened it, removing the bangles.

"Give me your wrist," I said sternly.

She looked at me, too surprised at my tone to speak. I put out my hand and took her bare arm, her sleeves were to the elbows, and I deliberately put the three bracelets on while she stood petrified.

"I have had enough of your disagreeable temper," I said in the same voice. "You will wear these, and anything else I choose to give you, though your rudeness will soon remove my desire to give you anything."

She was absolutely flabbergasted, but I had touched her pride.

"I apologize if I have seemed rude," she said at last. "I—suppose you have the right really—only—" And her whole slender body quivered with a wave of rebellion.

"Let us say no more about the matter, but go into lunch; only you will find that I am not such a weakling as you no doubt supposed you would have to deal with." I hobbled up from my chair, Burton discreetly not having entered the room. Alathea gave me my crutch, and we went into the dining room.

While the servants were in there I led the conversation upon the war news and ordinary subjects and she played the game, but when we were alone with the coffee I filled her glass with benedictine, which she had refused when Burton handed the liqueurs. She had taken no wine at all.

"Now drink whatever toast you like," I told her. "I am going to drink one to the time when you don't hate me so much and we can have a little quiet friendship and peace."

She sipped her glass, and her eyes became inscrutable. What she was thinking of I do not know.

I find myself watching those eyes all the time. Every reflection passes through them, they are as expressive of all shades of emotion as the eyes of a cat, though the beautiful Madonna tenderness I have never seen again since the day when she held the child in her arms and I was rude to her.

When we went back into the salon I knew that I was passionately in love with her. Her restiveness is absolutely alluring, and excites all my hunting instinct. She looks quite lovely and the subtle magnetism which drew me the first days, even when she appeared poor and shabby, and red of hand, is stronger than ever.

Equipments and Oils With 5-Point Losses Lead Severe Setback After Upturn

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

The most noteworthy feature of current developments is the very feature which, if carried too far, would lead to disastrous conditions after a period of more or less excited business.

This feature is the marking up of prices.

Just what is happening:

United States Steel Corporation has advanced pipe prices $4 to $5 a ton.

Cotton crossed 23 cents a pound, a price not equalled since 1920, on the down swing from the 42-cent quotation.

Print cloths have moved to a new high price.

"Wool prices generally higher," reports the leading trade authority.

Woolen goods have also been marked up rather sharply.

"Sugar joins the advance," reads another headline over an item which records an advance of 25 per cent. in Cuban raw within the last month.

Leather and hides have also risen during the last week.

* * *

Butter and cheese have both been marked up.

So have eggs, onions and peas.

Wheat has enjoyed a pronounced advance and is now very substantially higher than a year ago.

Corn last week touched a new high quotation for the year, and is approximately 50 per cent. above the price it commanded at this time last year.

Oats have also broken into new high ground for the year at a very substantial advance over a year ago.

Flour, likewise, moved up last week.

Lead, spelter and tin went higher.

The lumber trade reported advances in several varieties of timber.

* * *

The basic truth is that salaries and wages are not, as a whole, on a level permitting liberal buying at advancing prices. Nor is our agricultural population in a position to purchase manufactured goods at a rising scale of prices.

* * *

This being so, nothing is more important than that all interests strive conscientiously to keep prices down to the lowest feasible level. Unless the utmost self-restraint and moderation be exercised by sellers during the next few months, the whole improvement which has been and still is under way in business could easily be wrecked.

* * *

However, viewing conditions by and large, there is warrant for looking for further improvement in general business if we all act rationally.

Replies to Investors

Queries of interest to investors will be answered in this column or by mail. Send questions, with stamped, self-addressed envelope, to Frank H. Meleon, Financial Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

To M. R., Newtonville—Although the stock has advanced well in both issues and is near year's high, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul does not belong in the investment class. Although the road appears to have been making improvement in the last several months, it may be some time before the recovery reaches the point where directors will consider it prudent to resume dividends on this class of stock.

American International.

To F. L. R., Cedar St.—If you can afford to hold your American International Corporation stock, I would do it rather than sell at a loss. The company is in good financial position, according to latest statements. Company is still bending its efforts toward collection of receivables, largely owed by South American customers, and while process is necessarily slow old accounts are being gradually liquidated. With world affairs unsettled the development of new and profitable business by American International Corporation subsidiaries is difficult and earnings are consequently small.

American Woolen.

To M. D. M. Milton—I see no occasion for any but continued bullish movement in American Woolen. Business assures company of fair operations throughout Winter, and present year should not, at worst, be under average, while it may be above that mark. New tariff benefits woolen, and full extent of benefit remains to be seen; probably stock has not yet appreciated it in entirety.

TEXAS GULF SULPHUR EARNINGS INCREASED

Texas Gulf Sulphur reports total earnings for third quarter as $1,-475,468, against $871,773 in the second quarter. Earnings for the first nine months of 1922 total $2,752,336, and more than cover $4 annual dividend on 635,000 shares stock. Total surplus, including reserve for depletion, Sept. 30 was $6,456,670.

PRICES ARE STEADY IN LONDON MARKET

Prices were steady in London. Consols sold 57⅜, up ⅛; British war loan 3½s 95; 5s 101¾; up ⅛; 4½s 97; 4s 100½; funding 4s 85⅝, up ⅛; French 5s 33⅛, off 1⅜; Russian 5s 12; 4½s 8; 4s 5. Rio Tinto 38, off ½.

CENTRAL R. R. OF NEW JERSEY UP 20 TO HIGH

Equipment and oils with 5-point losses led a severe setback after a strong start on the New York Stock Exchange. Money renewed at 4½ per cent. There was a rally in the last hour which brought most prices above the day's low.

Central Railroad of New Jersey lifted 20 points to a new high for the year on top of its 15-point advance last week.

In the setback period losses of around 5 points showed in Baldwin, American Locomotive, Mex Pete, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Houston Oil.

PESSIMISM APPEAR.

There were losses of 3 to 4 or more points in General Asphalt, General Electric, American Can, Famous Players, Crucible and Consolidated Gas.

Much of the selling appeared attributable to pessimism prevailing in speculative circles over the market's failure to show any pronounced rallying power following last week's general decline.

Battering of high-grade railroad shares like Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville & Nashville, Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, Reading and Canadian Pacific with resultant losses of 2 to 2½ points was an entering wedge to an extensive selling movement.

Industrials and specialties broke at times in a rather precipitate fashion with numerous losses of from 2 to 6 points being recorded.

TIDEWATER OFF 6.

Tidewater Oil lost 6 points, American Express 5, National Biscuit 4½, U. S. Industrial Alcohol 3* and Pullman, General Asphalt preferred, Corn Products, Studebaker, American Tobacco and Standard Oil of California 2 to over 3 points.

Bond Market Losses Outnumber Advances

In the foreign group some improvement was noted in the French 8s, Belgian 8s, Cuban Railroad 5s and Japanese first 4½s, but Lyons 6s, Bordeaux 6s, Berne 8s, and Cuba Republic 4½s were relatively backward.

Liberty 3½s advanced 12 cents on $100, while losses of 6 to 10 cents took place in all the other issues except the first and second 4¼s which were unchanged.

In the railroad list gains of approximately a point were scored by Norfolk & Western convertible 6s, Denver & Rio Grande refunding 5s and Lehigh Valley 6s.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit issues were heavy, the 5s, 7s, certificates and 7 per cent. certificates stamped dropping ⅞ to 2½ points.

Mammoth Oil Gains on New York Curb

Standard Oil issues on the New York Curb were influenced largely by efforts to close out speculative accounts that had been accumulated by some professional traders, and demand was in scant volume. Ohio Oil started at 333 and yielded to 324 before mid-day, and Standard Oil of Indiana dropped from 127¾ to 123¼. Vacuum Oil yielded from 655 to 645, and the new stock was traded in at 42 to 41⅝.

Standard Oil of New Jersey, new stock, when issued, was traded in at 45½ to 43¾. Imperial Oil of Canada ranged from 115 to 115.

Similar movements were noted in the independent oil stocks, with the exception of Mammoth Oil, which was in brisk demand most of the day, opening up ⅝ at 41½ and advancing to 42¾.

WESTINGHOUSE RAIL BUSINESS IN JUMP

Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company announces heavy increase in its railroad business. An order for five passenger locomotives from the New York, New Haven & Hartford has been increased to eight locomotives, totaling $1,250,000. Pennsylvania has placed an order amounting to about $500,000 for electrical equipment for three locomotives, two to be used at Manhattan Terminal.

INCREASE IS MADE IN COAL LOADINGS

Coal loadings Thursday 28,784 cars exceeding previous Thursday by 1,284 cars. Daily average first four days of last week was 32,802 cars, while daily average for same period week before was 31,501 cars. Daily average for October last year was 31,045 cars.

HOULTON BONDS ARE BID FOR IN BOSTON

Houlton, Me., $72,000 4½ per cent. bonds were awarded to Fidelity Trust Company, Portland, Me., at 99.869. Other bidders were: Raymond Rich Company, 99.50; Estabrook & Co., 99.34; Harris, Forbes & Co., 98.86 and Timberlake Company 98.37.

PRODUCTION IN BOOTS AND SHOES IS HIGH

Production of boots and shoes in United States during August, 28,077,-292 pairs, exceeded only once since November, 1921. This was in March of current year, when 29,686,011 pairs were manufactured.

GOLD SUPPLY TO ASSIST RAILS

That the unprecedented supplies of gold in the United States will form the basis of credit for extensive new railroad financing, and that they will not bring about a "Secondary Inflation" in commodity prices, is the view advanced by Thomas Gibson, New York economist. In his Quarterly Forecast of Business and Financial Conditions, Mr. Gibson says:

"The railroad financing of the next few years will be partly in the nature of refunding, and partly in the nature of new stock issues. The roads and their bankers are extremely anxious to balance up the financial structure, which is now rather lop-sided, by issuing new stocks and less bonds.

Wall St. Notes

U. S. STEEL is being bought in some quarters on expectations of extra dividend on common next year.

MEXICON PETE'S earnings for year to date are estimated at annual rate of $70 a share.

AMERICAN SUMATRA'S net loss of $114,399 for first half of 1922 should be taken less seriously than if earnings since that date had not been showing marked improvement.

BURLINGTON is doing nearly a maximum business, according to President Holden. Grouping plan for this line, Northern Pacific and Great Northern, is only in early stages of discussion.

DAVISON CHEMICAL break was laid to dissolution of pool, second time in a few months this stock has suffered similarly.

U. S. RUBBER is in wide favor for rise on long pull.

PACIFIC OIL still has the Street guessing. Many think there must be some fire where there was so much smoke.

BANKS AND TRUST companies apparently in line for extra dividends on basis of earning power and surpluses include Bankers & Trust Co., Bank of New York & Trust Co. and Farmers Loan & Trust Co.

HALLGARTEN & CO. and Cassatt & Co. announce that all Cosden & Co.'s shares which were recently offered by the company have been subscribed for by stockholders.

NEW YORK CENTRAL holders are confident 7 per cent. dividend is coming to push stock up so that new issue can be disposed of at par.

CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN is in line to resume 8 per cent. for preferred and 7 per cent. for common. Earnings are mounting.

PRINCE & WHITELY—Purchase the high-grade rails and ignore the day-to-day fluctuations.

TOBEY & KIRK—The policy of buying selected stocks on recessions still seems advisable.

W. J. WOLLMAN & CO.—Look for irregular opening with market showing little change over the course of last few days.

GOODBODY & CO.—We expect continuation of strong market with movements in specialties.

Ipswich Mills Dividend

Ipswich Mills have declared regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on preferred stock, payable November 1, 1922, to stock of record October 19.

Manipulation

exerts a powerful influence upon prices, but is a subject with which the public is familiar only in a haphazard way.

How a Pool Is Formed

In what way a pool is formed—how finances are raised—how stocks are accumulated—how prices are put up—and how and when stocks are distributed, is clearly discussed in a special article in this week's Market Letter.

WHEN IS TIME TO SELL STOCK?

At the Saturday morning session of subscribers to the Harvard Economic Service, Professor Persons reported on studies by the committee on the relation between fluctuations of the interest rate on commercial paper and average stock prices. Over the last 25 years it developed that a drop of 1¼ per cent. in the average monthly rate on 60 to 90-day paper corrected for seasonal variations would have been a very satisfactory buying signal, and conversely, an increase of 1¼ per cent. in the rate would have been an equally satisfactory selling signal; these points corresponding very closely to the extreme troughs and peaks in the Dow Jones averages.

A speculator who had relied on this signal would have missed the 1919 bull market entirely, however, and would have been out of the market altogether for nearly five years, for after the "sell" signal near the top of the stock market boom of 1916, the next "buy" signal did not come until during the depression last Summer.

The recent low average price of 60 to 90-day commercial paper was 3.88 per cent in August, from which it has risen to about 4½ per cent. currently. The committee and its subscribers will watch with interest to see if a further rise to a fraction over 5 per cent will prove that the top of the current bull swing has been reached.

PRICES ARE MIXED IN COTTON FUTURES

Mixed prices showed in New York cotton futures, quotations bearing a loss of 15 points on October, while other months were up 1 to 14 points, heavy realizing by Wall Street and Commission concerns and selling by Southern warehouses were absorbed by foreign purchasing, buying by the trade and new accumulations for speculative accounts. December sold at 23.86, or 1 point above the previous high of the year.

REORGANIZATION OF B. R. T. DISCUSSED

Committees representing Brooklyn Rapid Transit stock and 7 per cent. gold notes of 1921 have formulated independently tentative plans for reorganizing B. R. T. system. Joint negotiations are expected to begin soon, and it is hoped to announce a plan of reorganization about the first of next year.

SUPREME COURT WILL REVIEW MASS. TRUSTS

The taxable status of "Massachusetts Trusts" under the revenue acts of 1916 and 1918, involved in cases brought by Simon and Summitt L. Hecht, Arthur L. Howard and Robert S. Barlow, will be reviewed by the Supreme Court under a petition just granted.

The trusts are a form of organization whereby trustees under a declaration of trust hold legal title to property, manage it for the benefit of those who from time to time own certificates of beneficial interest in it and pay the net income to the shareholders.

The First Circuit Court of Appeals held the trusts to be subject to the taxes imposed upon associations.

TRAVEL BRIEFS

NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL

California tourist travel has started earlier than usual this year, according to J. H. Scholtz, general agent of the Chicago Northwestern Railway. More reservations via the Chicago-Northwestern-Union Pacific line have been placed during the past two weeks than ever before at this season.

There has been a gradual moving forward of the season for Californiaward travel during the past several years. The demand for accommodations this year, however, has begun even earlier than was anticipated.

FRANCIS IN TOWN.

Mr. John Francis, general passenger agent of the C. B. & Q. R. R., and one of the best known passenger traffic men in America, was in town Wednesday and Thursday, visiting the local office of the railroad in the Old South Building. Despite business duties, he found time to renew acquaintances with his many friends here.

HUGE EQUIPMENT ORDER.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway System has placed orders totaling $18,582,000 for equipment to be delivered during 1923, announces S. W. Manning, general agent of the Santa Fe for the New England district. The order comprises fifty locomotives, 2,000 refrigerator cars, 1,000 box cars, 1,000 auto cars, 500 coal cars, 500 stock cars and 150 cabooses.

BRINGS NEW BOOKINGS.

The great increase in the demand for reservations on the all-steel "Oriental Limited" train, operated between Chicago and the North Pacific Coast by the Great Northern Railway, is attributed by J. H. Kenney, traveling passenger agent of the company, to the lavish praise of local travelers returning from Glacier National Park and the Pacific Coast. Every modern appointment and convenience has been incorporated into the equipment of this now famous train, which completes the journey from Chicago to Seattle in exactly seventy-two hours, or three days. Many reservations are being booked well in advance at the office in the Old South Building.

MEN KNOWN HERE HONORED

A. B. Smith, formerly general passenger agent of the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad, and now passenger traffic manager of the Northern Pacific, was elected president, and C. B. Ryan, passenger traffic manager of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company, was elected vice-president, by the convention of the American Association of Passenger Traffic Officials held recently at Louisville. Both men are well known and popular with the railroad fraternity in New England.

FLORIDA GUIDE ISSUED

An attractively illustrated booklet containing full information about the various southern resorts, including Pinehurst, Camden and Florida, east and west coast cities, has just been issued by the Seaboard Air Line. Copies are being distributed by John A. Blaser, New England passenger agent. Those interested may obtain copies at the office of the company, 535 Old South Building.

RUFFO PLEASES BIG AUDIENCE AT CONCERT

By FRED J. McISAAC.

The most successful concert yet given in Boston by Titta Ruffo occurred at Symphony Hall yesterday under the auspices of Albert Steinert. Yvonne D'Arle, one of the young sopranos of the Metropolitan Opera Company, assisted him, as did Alberto Sciaretti, pianist.

Titta Ruffo, a baritone, is the idol of the Italians of New York since the death of Caruso. No tenor approaches him in popularity. He is one of the last of the heroic opera singers of a decade or more ago, singers with tremendous voices, who are giving place to mild mannered performers with light voices and a smoother art. Such singers please but do not excite.

When Titta Ruffo hits a high "G" his countrymen in the audience go wild. There was tremendous enthusiasm yesterday, and Ruffo was forced to give encore after encore. He sang baritone airs from "Dinorah," by Meyerbeer; "Andrea Chenier," of Giordano; "Favoruta," by Donizetti, and "L'Africaine," by Meyerbeer, and with Miss D'Arle sang the duet from "Don Giovanni," by Mozart.

Ruffo has a great dark voice of terrific power. At times he is a Niagara of tone, and his high tones are thrilling in effect and beautiful in quality. Such a man can dispense with vocal finesse, and he does.

Miss D'Arle is a very attractive stage personality, graceful and fascinating. It is reported that not so long ago she was a cabaret singer, whose beautiful voice attracted opera experts, and after some special training she was added to the forces of the Metropolitan. She has a voice of great beauty and peculiar appeal, lyrico-dramatic in quality. Nervousness was probably responsible for some bits of poor phrasing, and unsteadiness in the high voice. She has come along too fast for assurance. Her diction in English songs was not distinct, but this is a fault of most opera singers, so why pick on her?

HAIR SPECIALIST

YOUR HAIR

The Hair Cell, too small to be seen with the naked eye, is the basis of hair-life.

Millions of these constitute the scalp. Their only source of food supply is the circulating blood up the neck artery.

The carotids (ka-rot-ids) are the two great arteries of the neck that convey the blood to the head, scalp and hair.

Obviously then, the growth of hair on your head is wholly dependent upon blood circulating up through the neck.

Getting Bald is really slow starvation of the hair cells. See me today.

Europe's Debt to Us

Its Payment Would Not Only Aid This Country and Curtail Some of the Swashbuckling Abroad.

Secretary Hoover tells us that Europe can and ought to pay her debts to the United States. He also graciously tells us that Great Britain wants to pay her debts to the United States.

We are very glad to know both that Europe can pay her debts to the United States and that Great Britain is glad to pay her debts to the United States. Great Britain is very gracious, indeed.

Mr. Hoover adverts to a fact which we have had very much in mind and which frequently we have adverted to, namely, that a very small percentage of the cost of rattling the saber through Europe would pay the nations' debts to the United States.

Not only is Europe bound in honor to pay its debts, but it is bound in gratitude to pay them to the United States, its savior. Let the nations of Europe stop swashbuckling around, divest themselves of their armament, practice economy and adhere to the promises they made, the vows they took to high Heaven when defeat was staring them in the face and they prayed for victory. Then they would find it very easy to pay their debts to the United States and we would find it very easy to pay our soldiers' bonus and to do a great many other things besides.

Indeed, we would be doing an act of friendship to our European debtors if we insisted that they should pay their debts. An editor of the Boston American had a friend who was a skillful man in his own business and whose credit was good at his bank. But one day he wandered far afield in some speculation and lost a lot of money and fell into debt. He went to his banker to renew a note, never doubting for a moment that the note would be renewed because his notes always had been renewed without question.

But the banker, who had heard something of our friend's speculation outside his legitimate business, shook his head and said, "No, I must insist upon payment of this loan. I lend you money because I have confidence in your knowledge of your own legitimate business. I have no confidence of respect for the collateral business in which you are now engaged." "But," replied our friend, "I am not asking you to lend me money for that business. I will get money for that business outside this bank." Then the banker said, "If you did not get the money from this bank for your legitimate business, you would not be able to get money for what I am bound to believe is your illegitimate business, for you would have to support your legitimate business first. So if I renewed your note I would be enabling you to carry on your illegitimate business a little longer."

The banker was right, the refusal of that loan for the legitimate business compelled our friend to abandon his part in the speculative enterprise and saved him later from the ruin that overtook his side partners.

So if we insist that Europe shall pay her debts to us, she will not have money to pay for this swashbuckling imperialism which sets little nations onto each other, blindly forgetting or obstinately careless of the fact that it is the little nations which strike the spark which sets the whole world afire. If some of these nations had to pay their debts they would have no money to support armies and navies which plunder.

We are strong for insisting upon paying the last farthing of the debt to us and we repeat again, we are very glad to know that Great Britain is so anxious to pay. We shall always be ready to receive Great Britain's payments as rapidly as they become due.

The Poor Professor

Pietists and relatively plutocratic journalists are wont to indulge in platitudes regarding the pay of professors and teachers. They like to say that these good folk should teach for the joy of teaching and in response to a "call" similar to that which was supposed to make ministers unmindful of the material reward for their labors.

Which was all very well while the community held such workers in the highest esteem and gave them a social status more valuable than money. Today all professionalism, whether religious or educational, has in practical sense become so secularized that proper pay must be attached to these activities if they are to continue to attract even those fine, consecrated souls who may still be said to hear a call to this most precious type of social service.

We should hear and heed the cry of such women as Mrs. Bruce, wife of a member of the faculty of the University of California. She asserts that the wife of an instructor must choose between childlessness and the anguish of humiliation of many years of debt and drudgery. According to her a working girl can afford to spend five times as much on clothes as a professor's wife.

Most women probably spend too much thought and time and money on clothes. Leaving that aside, it would seem to be perfectly obvious that there must soon be an "adjusted compensation" which shall enable working women to spend not less for all the necessaries and comforts, but professors' and ministers' wives and women teachers much more.

State University

We are glad to note that Governor Cox is awake to the necessity of investigating the need for greater facilities for higher education. In other words, he is aware that there may be the need for a State university which so many of the States of the West and Southwest already enjoy.

Senator Walsh, when Governor, recommended a State university some years ago. If there was any need for it then there is more need for it now. It was then opposed by the old private endowed colleges. They feared its competition. Today, however, with the open-mindedness which generally is and ought always to be characteristic of those who represent our higher education, they have come to see that if there is a real need for a State university it cannot be indefinitely postponed. So there remains only the investigation of its necessity.

Hopelessly Out of Fashion

By Winifred Black.

WHAT! You think your mother loves you?

What an idea! Don't you know she's dying of jealousy of you?

Your brother? He's proud of you, you say—and you are proud of him? He's been your idol ever since you were a little girl?

He fought for you and scolded you, and took your part and teased you, and made fun of you and loved you, even when you had your hair in a pigtail and were always eating bread and butter with sugar on it?

Your father? Oh, yes, he's pretty well taken up with business and he doesn't make much of a fuss, but you know that he would die to save you one day's real suffering!

And so you think you ought to be dutiful and loving and, in a mild sort of way, happy, with your own family.

Well, of all the old-fashioned, mid-Victorian, impossible young persons I ever heard of!

Catch any one putting you in a book for a heroine! Why, you belong away back when they wore tight corsets and hoop-skirts and ringlets, carried smelling salts and little doll sun-parasols with scallops around the edges.

You're out of date! Oh, hopelessly out of the fashion. Didn't you know that? You'd better do a little reading along modern lines and look a few facts in the face, my dear.

Your mother has hated you ever since you were born?

And your father! Oh, yes, he conceals his real feelings, but you ought to know he's sorry you got well that time you were so ill.

Just think how much more money Dad could have spent on himself if you hadn't had to be sent away to school and those dresses you wear—don't you realize that he counts the cost of every fluffy frock you have and hates you for it?

No? Well, it's easy to see you haven't been reading any of the new books on phycho-analysis—not one of them!

What, you don't even like to hear about them? Whisper—neither do I!

I hate every word in every one of them.

Doubtless they are all right for use in penitentiaries and reform schools and homes for the feebleminded, but when it comes to judging sane, wholesome, natural human beings by their ridiculous rules and theories—no, thank you.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

No Attention Paid to Anonymous Communications

Aggression and Cruelty

Editor Boston American:

Under the headline, "Give the Turk What Is His," Mr. Michael H. Fallon strongly argued the Turk was justified in defending his country. But he forgot that anarchy and atrocities are not defence, but aggression and cruelty. The Turk, under the old and new governments, has massacred tens of thousands of Christians because those innocent creatures are, as he claims, his enemies in faith and religion. Any government that cannot defend law and order among its people is not fit for respect and independence.

It is most astonishing to read the words of Mr. Fallon at a time when the innocent Christians are brutally murdered by the Turkish hordes, and the thousands are driven to the sea seeking death in fear of the Turkish sword.

God, Men and Monkeys

Editor Boston American:

I have jus' returned from Los Angeles, where they are discussing evolution, and I'll try to answer your correspondent's appeal for light. "How can man be made in God's own image—and be likened to a monkey?" Mrs. Sparks seems to despise the monkey species, but, believe me, there are some humans today far below, in decency and intelligence, the humble ape, who has but one consort at a time and is a true parent to its young. My studies in evolution have taught me this: There is nothing in the whole universe but spirit and matter. The superior exists before the inferior. Therefore God, primarily, reigned alone. He said, "I will make man," and thus matter was evolved by Him as a medium or substance to work through. And all insect, animal, human or any kind of life can only come on earth through matter. Numbers of people believe the Creator can do anything He wills. The divine method of procedure declares not: Having created what we term "natural (Godly) laws," in the very beginning, they are the characteristics of His own divine being and are eternal. If God could change them at will He would not be omnipotent, but would be finite like the human—changeable, fickle.

More Propaganda

Editor Boston American:

At the close of the World War, in company with a young fellow whose parents were Irish, we had an opportunity of visiting the famous Tower of London of gruesome history, Madame Tussaud's Wax Works, the British Museum, and various other collections. To our surprise most of the criminal celebrities bore distinctly Celtic names and the descriptions would leave the gullible under the impression that Ireland's sons and daughters were the greatest monsters of all times. Another instance of British propaganda.

$50 a Month for Vet's Memory

By Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Recollection of a fight over a horse more than fifty years ago has just proved to be worth $50 a month for the rest of his life to Jacob Barger of Shawneetown, Ill.

But for this incident in his service in defence of the Union and the impression it made upon his youthful mind at the time, this seventy-six-year-old veteran of the Civil War would be without the financial aid a grateful government extends to its former soldiers in their declining years.

Private Barger's case is one of the most celebrated on the records of the Pension Bureau. It was pending for twenty years. Special examiners took more than 500 pages of testimony regarding his claim to a pension. They visited half a dozen States. Special bills providing a pension for him were introduced in seven or eight Congresses. Representative Thomas S. Williams of the Twenty-fourth Illinois District in which Shawneetown is situated, finally got through a bill at the session just closed and President Harding signed it.

The trouble arose from the fact that although Barger served more than a year in the Union army, there is no record in the Adjutant-General's office here either of his enlistment or discharge. No mention of his service is anywhere available among the army files.

But he insisted that he served and was in the thick of several battles. Pension Bureau examiners checked up with every surviving member of the company in which Barger said he served. Some of his former comrades readily recalled him. Others failed to recollect him, and some even asserted there was no such man in their outfit.

Then the old soldier told the story of the fight between two members of the company over a horse. It was a terrific encounter, and Private Barger unfolded the story in such detail as only an eye-witness could have recalled. He even remembered the name of one of the combatants.

The examiners made another round of the survivors. The story of the fight was confirmed, and when Representative Williams produced this evidence before the House Committee on Invalid Pensions it convinced the members that Private Barger was telling the truth and was entitled to a pension. The committee reported out a bill granting him $50 a month and it went through both the House and the Senate and, with the President's signature attached to it shortly before adjournment, it is now a law.

SEEN AND HEARD

STATE SENATOR WELLINGTON WELLS of Boston is now owner of the farm at Chesham, N. H., which was the old homestead of the Willard family, once occupied by a grandfather of the late FRANCES WILLARD, founder of the W.C.T.U. It is but a few miles, by the way, from the "Old Homestead" made famous by the actor DENMAN THOMPSON.

Postal receipts are increasing rapidly, say reports from Washington. That may mean mounting national prosperity. It may mean that an election approaches and with its approach the usual cluttering of mail boxes with unread communications from aspiring candidates.

UNUSUAL SIGHTS — Six Chinese in a revolving door. Oriental man and five slant-eyed kids. Coming out of a downtown department store they encountered the whirling exit. Two kids went into one of the quarter-sections of the door. Father and three more kids, the smallest of the quintet, negotiated the next section. They went through nicely, as though born to revolving doors. East is West.

A new incentive for supremacy in sports between the army and navy is being offered by SIR HARRY BRITTAN, founder and chairman of the American Officers' Club in London. It is in the nature of an old English loving cup made in England in 1772.

The largest American flag in continuous use is in the National capital. It is in the court of the postoffice in Pennsylvania avenue. It is suspended from the level of the eighth floor and reaches to the third floor. The measurements show the flag to have a fly of 70 feet, four inches and a hoist of 39 feet. The field is 28 feet by 20 feet and the stripes are nearly a yard wide.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON LAW OF BALLOONS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Please tell me how many cubic feet there would be in a balloon thirteen feet in diameter; what kind of gas has the greatest lifting power, and what would be the lifting capacity of such a balloon filled with such a gas?—John McDonald, Quincy, Mass."

IN telling you what you want to know I will also tell you how to find out for yourself. When the balloon is filled with gas it will be practically spherical in shape. What you need to know is the cubic content of a sphere of given diameter.

To calculate that you multiply the cube of the diameter (the diameter multiplied twice by itself) by the constant Pi, which amounts to about 3.14159 (not quite 3 1-7), and divide the product by 6. Applying this we have the cube of 13, equal to 2,197, which multiplied by 3.14159 becomes 6,902, and finally dividing by 6, our answer is 1,150.33—the number of cubic feet in the sphere.

Now for the gas. The lighest gas is pure hydrogen, which weighs about 1-14' as much as air, the precise ratio varying with circumstances. To get the greatest lifting power, then, you should employ hydrogen.

Next, for the actual lifting power of a balloon thirteen feet in diameter, filled with hydrogen gas. In the first place you must know this fact, viz., that any body immersed in air is buoyed upward (though it may not be actually lifted) by a force equal to the weight of a quantity of air having the same bulk, or cubic dimension, as the body.

Our balloon, as we found by calculation, contains 1,150.33 cubic feet. Now air weighs, on the average, an ounce and a quarter per cubic foot, so that the 1,150.33 cubic feet of air displaced by the balloon must weigh about 1,438 ounces, or 89⅞ pounds—say ninety pounds for an even number.

Since the silk of a balloon is very thin, we may call the cubic content of the interior 1,150 cubic feet, which means that the balloon contains that amount of hydrogen. Now, one cubic foot of hydrogen weighs about 0.089 of an ounce, and 1,150 cubic feet would weigh, in round numbers, 102 ounces, or 6⅜ pounds. Subtract this from the ninety pounds representing the force with which the air urges the balloon upward, and the remainder, 83⅝ pounds, is the lifting force of the balloon. To know how much it will actually lift, however, you must subtract the weight of the silk bag and other necessary appurtenances.

If you filled your balloon with coal gas, which is eight times as heavy as hydrogen, the lifting power would be diminished to less than forty pounds.

Because we are confined, except in imagination, to this little earth, we have but a slight practical acquaintance with the possibilities involved in these simple physical laws. Who ever thinks, for instance, of the lifting effect that the air he lives in has upon his own body? Yet the average human is continually buoyed up with a force of about four ounces, equal to the weight of the air he displaces.

—Says Medbury—

Some Rich Guys Are So Unpopular They Have to Hire a Friend

Several persons have solved the unemployment problem by taking jobs as traveling companions to millionaires.

Some rich guys are so unpopular they haven't got a friend so they have to hire one.

All you have to do is to follow them over the United States and Europe and act like you were enjoying yourself.

You've got to let everybody think you're having a good time except the guy you're working for.

One traveling companion went through Yellowstone National Park and took in all the sights. At five o'clock he went back to the hotel and said "Thank the Lord, this day's work is done."

When his employer wanted him to go and see the night life in Paris he charged him overtime.

He only worked from 9 a. m. till 5 p. m. and if his boss couldn't arrange it so he could see the night life in the day time then he should be willing to pay extra.

A traveling companion has lots of time to himself. If your employer hears about some beautiful historic spot and he's too busy, he sends you out to look at it for him.

Of course the average millionaire loves to look at scenery but that's what he pays you for.

You have to travel in private cars when you could go tourist and save the difference.

Of course your main job is to sit and read to your employer. He loves to have you read to him fiction, like "President Harding has signed the Bonus Bill", or "Standard Oil Company to give gas free to the poor."

Then, of course, you go sightseeing with him in the automobile. He goes to sleep but you're supposed to keep your eyes open and get them full of scenery and dust. Then when you get home you have to sit down and tell him everything he saw.

He gives you a picture of himself and tells you to go out and photograph twelve different backgrounds for it.

Most guys who hire traveling companions are absent-minded. One bird sat up till five in the morning trying to think what it was he wanted to do and finally he remembered it was that he wanted to go to bed early.

The average millionaire hires a companion to keep him company and then he has to hire another guy to keep his companion company.

But most of these rich birds are even tempered. Always crabby.

A traveling companion very soon tires of his job, and most of them leave their wealthy employers and go to work for some hermit.
